COURT reports supply texts for birth control advocates. Mrs. Edith Cromwell told the judge her husband insisted on having more children in spite of her delicate health.

This husband and wife live in a two-room basement, with hardly enough to eat. Mrs. Cromwell has had 13 children and buried six of them.

MR. CROMWELL said it was a man's duty to have as many children as he could, and admitted he was proud of himself and wanted to be prouder.

THE judge told the proud father that he was a moron, with the brain of a child 10 years old, and would have sent him to jail had not Mrs. Cromwell forgiven him and taken him home. These are many similar morons.

OUR high-spirited Congress was outraged when President Coolidge vetoed five bills, and four of the bills were repassed over his veto, an unusual outburst, so near to a national election.

You will notice that the bill that was NOT repassed over the Coolidge veto was the McNary-Haugen bill, supposed to relieve farmers.

MANY of our legislators voted for that bill to make friends at home, and voted for it only because they were sure the President would veto it. Many of them also would have vetoed it had they been President and equipped with the necessary amount of courage.

ANY Republican candidate openly favoring the McNary-Haugen bill in the past or future will be looked upon as the President's political enemy, and that will make it hard for him to be the Republican 1928 nominee, and impossible to get the President's blessing, as such.

IF IN Wal' Street you see a pointing arrow and a sign reading, "This Way to the Bear Pit," turn around and run. You should have seen the poor Bears struggling in the Radio Bear trap yesterday.

IT TAKES so little to make the speculator happy. Brokers' loans dropped $46,000,000 and up went stocks, although those loans are still $760,000,000 above last March.

The only wise thing, as Will Rogers says, is not to gamble.

THE fact, mentioned here, that the Buick Automobile Company plans a great sales campaign for July was mistakenly supposed by some readers to mean a change in Buick cars.

No such change is announced, but Buick does intend to repeat the powerful advertising campaign that, two years ago, made it hard for agents and customers to get cars. If you want a Buick, order it now.

THE House of Representatives has passed the Boulder Dam bill, authorizing government to save, and use for the people, water and power now going to waste, worth hundreds of millions a year. That is the biggest news for a long time. The question is, now, what will the Senate do?

The intelligent power gentlemen won't let the people utilize one of their rivers without a struggle.

GERMANS extract benzol, competitor of gasoline, by "liquifying coal;" 100,000 tons of German coal will be made into benzol this year.

The process is too expensive to compete with gasoline at present American prices. But wise Standard Oil has bought the German process, and Standard Oil of New Jersey is already experimenting with it.

THE Consolidation Coal Company, controlled by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will perform a surgical operation necessary to establish coal production on a sensible basis.

Ten plants in two coal regions will be shut down, and the men at work will be able to work full time. It is hoped to end overproduction, wage-cutting and price-cutting.

It is a drastic policy, but the only solution, and labor, it is said, backs the plan.

OUR Canadian brothers are more prosperous than they ever were, and American farmers will be interested to learn that Canadian farms produced more last year than they did the year before by almost $100,000,000.

KILLERS OF THREE TRAILED

LAMAR, Col., May 26.—(INS.)—Hundreds of armed citizens and peace officers, assisted by several airplanes manned with machine guns, were scouring the "bad lands" of Western Kansas and Eastern Colorado today for the murderous bandits who robbed the First National Bank of Lamar.

Three men already have been killed by the desperadoes and a fourth is believed to have been slain. Two of the bandit's victims were shot down in the holdup of the Lamar bank. They were A. N. Parrish, president of the institution, and his son, John Parrish, cashier.

The third victim was Dr. W. W. Wineinger, of Dighton, Kan., across the Colorado state line where the bandits fled following the holdup. Dr. Wineinger was lured from his home on the pretext that he was to treat an injured man.

Girls Hurt In Crash Left

Abandoned by their companions, when their auto overturned on Babcock boulevard last midnight, Elizabeth Nigg, 17, and her half-sister, Alice Davis, 16, of 1033 Haller street, were found unconscious by Rev. Father Michael Banfield, of Mercy Hospital today.

Taken to the hospital, they told County Detective Philip Goldberg that their companions had fled when the car turned over.

The girls, detectives said, told them that upon leaving a movie last night they met two men, who invited them to take a ride.

Both girls are suffering from shock and exposure in addilon to numerous bruises.

DASHES BACKWARDS IN STATION DRIVE

Two pedestrians were injured this morning when an automobile ran wild in Pennsylvania Station drive. The brakes on the machine became loosened in some unknown manner and the car ran backwards for about 100 yards, jumping the curb and pinning the two victims against a wall. The injured men are W. C. Williams, Powhatan street, and Robert Breichenbaugh, South Braddock avenue. Both were treated at Allegheny General Hospital for cuts and bruises. The dotted line shows the course of the machine.

Pyle May Lose on Derby

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 26.—"On to Broadway!" is the battle cry today of the greatest show on earth—the "Bunion Derby."

Here they are in Passaic, the 52 survivors of C. C. Pyle's transcontinental foot race, resting their tired and aching dogs as they await the starter's pistol that will send them off again on the final jog that will terminate at Madison Square Garden tonight. They have been running for 84 days since they started from Los Angeles and have covered 3,390.1 miles. But they are expected by Mr. Pyle to sprint 20 miles around the board oval when they pant through the doors of the Garden this evening.

"I'm going to give Broadway a real show," said Pyle this morning. "Theatrical producers who invade the great open spaces always boast of a New York cast. I will say that I am presenting my own—bigger than Barnum's—with its own Mojave desert atmosphere, the blisters, the sunburn, the whiskers and sprinkle of sand from out where men are men."

26 COUPLES DANCE ON AFTER 2 COLLAPSE

Two dance teams were eliminated from the Homestead dance marathon this morning when the girl members collapsed. Another team was disqualified, when weary bodies led to a display of temperament. Two other teams, making a total of five, retired since last midnight. Twenty-six couples started the one hundred and thirty-third hour at noon.

Tillie Janaszek and her dance partner, Duke Domian, tarried in their dancing after spending 129 hours and 3 minutes on the floor to engage in a little spat. They argued when they should have been dancing and were disqualified.

Numerous other couples have had tilits and the promoters say the dancers are becoming temperamental as the hours drag on.

The Motor Square Garden record of 122 hours was passed early today and the dancers are now shooting at the Uniontown record of 143 hours.

Vera Humbertson of 1313 Main street, Sharpsburg, went to sleep on the bosom of her dance partner, George Rihm, of Kittanning Pike, Sharpsburg, and the added burden he had to drag around forced him to retire at 2:40 o'clock. They danced 122 hours and 40 minutes.

Grace Kelly, of 4114 Winterburn street, collapsed shortly after 6 o'clock and was carried from the hall to the training quarters, where doctors and nurses worked with her until she revived. Her dance partner Zana Yang, 4265 Second avenue, remained with her until the doctors had restored the girl to consciousness. Their time was 126:18.

The Anna Pocketss-Joseph Potz team, gave up the contest after dancing 120 hours and 10 minutes and Catherine Gazak and George Missin quit with a mark of 126:50.

An audience of 1500 remained in the gardens and a similar number in the theater to urge the contestants on during the early morning hours. The crowd dwindled at 4 o'clock, but shortly after breakfast the audience increased for the sixth day's effort.

ITALIA MAY BE HUNG ON PEAK

(Copyright, 1928, by the Associated Press.)

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, May 26.—(AP.)—Fear was entertained for the safety of the dirigible Italia this morning when the hours passed without any sign of the airship returning from the North Pole.

At 8:30 a. m. there was neither any news from nor regarding Gen. Umberto Nobile's craft. She had been in flight almost 76 hours at that time.

One suggestion advanced was that the airship might have collided with a high mountain in Northern Spitzbergen during her flight southward through the fog. One of these mountains is 1,500 meters high.

With the Italia, now out of Spitzbergen on her North Pole flight more than 78 hours, the crew of the base ship Citta di Milano, bunkered coal all morning in preparation for sailing in search of the missing airship.

There was a strong north wind this morning. It was known that the airship had battled with strong winds practically her entire trip. The Italia reported on Thursday that the wind was sometimes so strong that she was actually forced backward.

It seemed probable that the airship's wireless had been silenced by the cold. The gondola in which the apparatus is situated is small and it must have been a frigid place during the flight under the prevailing conditions.

It was very cold here all night. A northerly wind blew and all the mountain tops were obscured by fog.

It was estimated that the ship carried enough fuel to remain in flight from 85 to 90 hours and that the last drop would be exhausted at 10:40 o'clock tonight. The airship left here at 4:40 a. m. Wednesday and reached the North Pole, which is about 750 miles from Kings Bay, at 12:20 a. m., Thursday. Two hours later she began the hazardous return trip against a strong adverse wind which steadily cut down her speed. Fog added to the difficulties of the fliers.

Ice from this fog soon encrusted her sides and it was thought probable that this had broken her wireless antennae, cutting off communication with the base ship.

There are 16 men aboard the Italia, including Gen. Nobile.

Should the Italia be down on the Arctic wastes, it carries equipment to enable the crew to fight their way toward safety. This includes six sledges, Canadian snow shoes and sleeping sacks of reindeer skin.

Mail Pilot Dies in Crash

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—(AP.)—James R. Reid, reserve pilot on the New York-Atlanta air mail route, was killed early today when his plane, carrying northbound mail from Richmond, Va., was wrecked in a field near the Tappahannock road, a few miles north of Richmond.

A report given out by Pitcairn Aviation, Inc., operator of the mail route, stated that the plane rolled down a 10-foot embankment while making a forced landing.

There are no telephones near the scene of the accident, and word of Reid's fate was not received until several hours later when a farmer drove up to the Richmond postoffice with Reid's mail.

No one saw the accident, and Pitcairn officials have therefore been unable to find out just what happened. No cause for the accident was revealed in an early morning examination of the wreckage.

Reid joined Pitcairn Aviation a month ago, coming from Chicago. He is believed to have no close relatives living. He was an excellent and experienced pilot, and was at one time chief pilot of the Pennsylvania Airways Corporation.

Lions Turn Show to Tragedy

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 26—(AP.)—Jealousy of seven veteran lions of Sparks circus nearly cost the life of John Guilfoyle, their trainer, here last night when they started fiighting to keep a new lion out of their act.

Guilfoyle in trying to rescue the new lion was bitten and clawed severely. He is in a serious condition, but unless blood poisoning or lockjaw sets in is expected to recover. His home is in Philadelphia.

Harriet Guilfoyle, leopard trainer, was the first to enter the cage to help her husband. A panic was narrowly averted when more than 1,000 persons stood up in the stands.

ICE CRUSTS BLIMP, BUCK WIND, NOBILE'S LAST RADIO

[The following may prove to be the last message received from the Arctic airship Italia, long overdue at its base on its return flight from the North Pole.—Editor's Note.]

By GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE,
Commander-in-Chief of the Dirigible Italia.

(Copyright, 1928, by the New York American, Inc.)

ABOARD THE ITALIA, May 25.—(6:55 p. m.)—The last 27 hours has seen our progress on the return trip from the North Pole retarded by extremely contrary and strong winds, compelling me to force the Italia's engines to their very limit.

The visibility has been very bad throughout our returning journey, whereas we enjoyed good visibility from Greenland to the Pole on our way north. On our way back fog has been with us continuously.

We are now in the neighborhood of Spitzbergen, but it is not yet possible for us to foresee what time we shall arrive there, as our previous forecasts of the time of our arrival have been shattered by adverse conditions which continually arose.

We had been confidently expecting to reach King's Bay about midday today, but important changes occurred in meteorological conditions, constantly taking place, shaped our course much against our will.

This morning we were shaping our course south along the twenty-fifth Meridian East of Greenwich and were sailing along above the fog at a height of 1,000 meters. But our progress has been constantly impeded by strong winds which have been blowing nearly all day at an average intensity of 45 to 50 kilometers an hour.

Shortly before 10 o'clock this morning I gave the order to descend below the fog bank, where we have since been trying to follow our appointed course by the single aid of our magnetic compass.

While I am sending this message we still have the wind against us and blowing at the rate of 40 to 50 kilometers.

Our greatest suffering has been from an abundant formation of ice crusts all over the Italia. These crusts, often becoming detached in large chunks, have been thrown violently against our bottom, but have only done insignificant damage. These damages have been easily repaired.

All is well on board.

PRINCETON BATTLE ON IN ASSEMBLY TODAY

TULSA, Okla., May 26.—Only one session of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church was scheduled for today, to open at 8:30 this morning and to adjourn about 2 this afternoon. Although no noon intermission was to break the proceedings, every one of the 966 commissioners apparently was in his place in the big auditorium of the First Church and the gallery was thronged with visitors in anticipation of the storm that threatened to break when the Princeton Theological Seminary report should be placed before the assembly for adoption or rejection.

The seminary report, prepared by special committee of 11, was read yesterday, but there was no debate, as action on it was on the docket for today. The report recommends substituting a single board of control of 33 members for the two boards which now govern the seminary. One member of the committee, Dr. Ethelbert D. Warfield, president of Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa., filed a dissenting report.

The liberal wing of the denomination favors adoption of the proposed new plan.

DR. MACARTNEY LEADS FIGHT

The conservative wing, led by Dr. Clarence E. Macartney, pastor of the First Church, Pittsburgh, has gathered every ounce of its strength to throw against it. The overwhelming victory of Dr. Hugh K. Walker of Los Angeles over Dr. J. Ambrose Dunkel, of Indianapolis, in the election of moderator Thursday, was regarded as foreshadowing adoption of the proposed changes, since Dr. Walker was supported by the liberals and Dr. Dunkel by the conservatives.

Feeling over the Princeton dispute broke out yesterday when Dr. Henry S. Vandyke, author, diplomate and former moderator of the church, addressed the assembly as an honor guest.

"There is just one issue," Dr. Vandyke said, "and that is whether Princeton Seminary belongs to a group of directors or to the Presbyterian Church. I am for the church."

PITTSBURGHERS TO PREACH

Protestant churches in Tulsa and nearby cities will be filled by visiting Presbyterian ministers tomorrow. Pittsburgh men have been assigned as follows: Dr. W. L. McEwen, First Lutheran; Dr. James H. Snowden, Centenary Methodist Episcopal South; Hillcrest Methodist Episcopal North, Dr. Paul Slonaker.

P. & L. E. BLAMES COUNTY FOR SLIDE; ASKS $25,000

DEPUTY TAKEN AS GUN-WAVER

Threatening gestures with a revolver in the Merchants Hotel, 419 Water street, resulted in the arrest of Raymond Baden, 38, Fayette county, police reported today. Patrolman James Rahl, called to the hotel at midnight by a clerk, took Baden to Central Police Station. Police say Boden is a deputy sheriff in Fayette county, employed on strike duty by the H. C. Frick Coal and Coke Company.

Boulder Dam May Hold Congress

ENTOMBED 6 DAYS, SAVED

MATHER, Pa., May 26.—(AP.)—Entombed for more than six days in the ruins of Mather mine, after an explosion there last Saturday afternoon, John Wade, 38, a Negro coal loader, taken from the mine alive last night, is reported in a critical condition at the Waynesburg Hospital.

He was found sitting in butt 24, north working, about two miles back in the mine, by rescue teams seeking the remaining dead, early last night. Butt 24 is practically half a mile from the right face rooms where the explosion took place.

He said he had wandered about the workings and had lived on contents of miners' food buckets he found in various sections of the mine.

How he escaped the deadly after damp that swept the explosion-torn mine was a mystery. Officials in charge of rescue crews are of the opinion Wade luckily followed air currents. He had been under ground 146 hours. The disaster took a known toll of 174 lives with several workers unaccounted for.

Another miner was rescued alive after having been inside the mine 60 hours. He is Frank Kubica, brought out Tuesday morning. At that time rescue squads believed no others could possibly have survived.

News of the rescue of Wade spread rapidly through the village. Mrs. Wade rushed to the mine tipple. On receiving confirmation of her husband's escape the "widow" became hysterical with joy.

AIRPLANE CRASH KILLS THREE

DORTMUND, Germany, May 26.—(AP.)—Three persons were killed today in the crash of a Lufthansa airplane in the regular Dortmund-Frankfort service. The plans crashed near Radevormwald and burst into flames.

The pilot and two passengers were killed and another passenger was seriously injured.

DELTA UPSILON ALUMNI HOLDS ANNUAL DINNER

Rundle, Colgate; Edward Schreiner, Michigan; W. W. Powell, Carnegie; Charles B. Horton, Columbia.

A "friend," Charles Vondiski, who had come to "help" her, left with the money, she told police, who arrested him and returned $194.

FARM BILL VETO IS UPHELD

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP.)—A change of heart by three Republicans and a 'one Democrat today had helped to bury another McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

In sustaining President Coolidge's veto of the measure yesterday, 31 to 50, the Senate lacked just four votes to obtain the required two-thirds majority for repassage. Had the four senators who voted for the bill when the Senate passed it a month ago, 53 to 23, not switched to uphold the veto, it would have been overridden.

But this assistance was not forthcoming and farm relief legislation thus was killed for the present session.

The senators were Curtis (Rep.), Kansas; Sackett (Rep.), of Kentucky; Waterman (Rep.), of Colorado, and Fletcher (Dem.), of Florida.

HOPES TO ADJOURN TUESDAY

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP.)—After one of the most strenuous days in legislative history, Congress today was well on the road to adjournment next Tuesday.

Except for the threat of a filibuster in the Senate on the Boulder Dam bill which the House passed yesterday without a record vote and hints of an attempt to get Senate action on the $274,000,000 Naval building program, also approved by the House, leaders saw nothing in the offing that might hold up passage of the House adjournment resolution.

This might be brought out of the Senate Appropriations Committee today or Monday.

Meanwhile, the Senate had only two conference reports to approve today before resuming debate on Boulder canyon. They were on the $145,000,000 second deficiency and postal rate revision measures. Conferees agreed to both yesterday and the House adopted the report on the former. It has yet to act on the Postal bill report.

In the House today, only the adoption of the conference compromise $222,495,000 tax reduction bill stood in the way of a clean sweep of its important bill calendar. Quick action was expected there on the report which the Senate approved yesterday without a roll call vote.

Although Senator Johnson, (Rep.), California, has served notice that he will hold Congress until later than Tuesday if the filibuster against his Boulder Dam bill assumes such proportions as to make a vote doubtful by that time, there is a feeling in some quarters that if the tax reduction and deficiency measures are sent to the White House without delay enough votes would be available to pass the Tuesday adjournment resolution.

HUNT KILLER OF THREE

bankment. It was found near his automobile, 20 miles south of Oakley, Kan. One of the bandits had been wounded in the bank shooting by young Parrish before the latter was killed. It is believed the desperatoes summoned Dr. Wineinger to attend the wounded bandit and then killed the physician as the easiest means of being rid of him.

Two other bank officials, E. S. Kissinger and Charles Lundgren were abducted by the bandits and taken on their wild flight into Kansas. Lundgren was released later, the bandits taking "pity" on him because he had only one arm.

Lundgren reached here last night and told of his experiences. He said the last he saw of Kissinger the man was lying in the bottom of a bandit car pleading for his life on behalf of his wife and baby. Lundgren said the two of the men wanted to kill them both, but they were voted down. He said he wouldn't give a nickel for Kissinger's chances.

REPORT BODY FOUND

Reports that the body of Kissinger had been found between Oakley and Scott City, Kan., could not be confirmed, but those familiar with the desperate character of the bandits have given up hope that the man will be found alive.

The bandits obtained $10,000 in cash and a like sum in bonds during the bank holdup. Some estimates place the amount of loot at double this sum. There were four members of the band and they fled in two automobiles, taking Kissinger and Lundgren along.

A reward of $20,000 if taken dead and $10,000 if captured alive was posted for the bandits today.

Six hundred automobiles, many of them carrying heavily armed citizens from Denver and nearby towns, are included in the posse. Four airplanes are acting as "eyes" for the searchers.

RECOVER BODY FROM RIVER

A body recovered from the Ohio river at Legionville dam early today is believed to be that of Richard Simmons, 55, who was drowned last February when his skiff capsized in the river near Sewickley. Simmons lived on a houseboat moored at the Sewickely landing.

Falling 40 feet from the street into a basement at Seventh street and Penn avenue, H. D. Hetrick, 35, of 6448 Aurelia street was killed instantly. Pedestrians said Hetrick had been looking up at a sign when he stumbled over open sidewalk doors. The body was taken to the morgue.

'BUNION DERBY' ENDS TONIGHT

was still leading the hoofing hegira by more than 16 hours and is practically certain to win the first prize. In all probability they will finish as follows:

Payne, first, $25,000; John Salo, Passaic, N. J., second, $10,000; Phillip Granville, Hamilton, Ont., third, $5,000; Mike Joyce, Cleveland, fourth, $2,500; Giusto Umek, Trieste, Italy, fifth, $1,000; William Kerr, Minneapolis, sixth, $1,000; Louis Perrella, Albany, N. Y., seventh, $1,000; Ed Gardner, Seattle, eighth, $1,000; Frank Von Flue, Kerman, Cal., ninth, $1,000; John Cronick, Saskatoon, Sask., tenth, $1,000.

STILL FULL OF PEP

The caravan of callouses is all set for the final trek. Even some of those who won't finish in the money are "pepped" up at the prospect of doing their stuff along the main stem in New York. "Wildfire" Thompson, of Barryville, Ark., who runs in his union suit and whose pink whiskers whistle in the breeze, said today he is going to step high, wide and fancy when he hits Broadway. All the entrants, however, were not as enthusiastic as "Wildfire." There was Sammy Robinson, Negro, of Atlantic City, whose underpinning has been giving him no end of discomfort.

"I'm dog-goned glad this is near over," said Sammy. "My feet are so hot they burned the blankets last night. When I get back to my home town of Atlantic City I'm going to park little Sammy beside that old ocean and stick my feet in it an' say, 'Drink, dogs, drink!'"

The runners will leave Passaic at 4 o'clock this afternoon for Homestead, thence to Burgin turnpike and then will swing right to Weehawken. Not being sea-going marathoners, they will take the ferry at Weehawken and will be deposited in New York City at Forty-second street. A one-way street to Madison Square will be closed off, after which the runners will be clocked off on the last dash for the Garden. Once in the Garden a moment or two will be taken as "time out" for introductions to the assembled throng, and then they will swing into the sprint of 200 laps, or 20 miles. These men are gluttons for punishment.

PYLE LOSES MONEY

Reports have been current that Mr. Pyle has "gone into the red" for many thousands of dollars. He has been paying the expenses of the runners all the way across the country. They have been getting lots of fresh air and not one of them has suffered from poor appetite. Mr. Pyle's food bill alone has been enormous, and he has had other trials and tribulations. In one town hoodlums mutilated the mummy of the "Notorious Oklahoma Outlaw" and another set of hoodlums broke into the snake tent and tore the stuffing out of the snakeskin that the "boy who eats snakes" chews upon at 10 cents a chew. Mr. Pyle expects that the big corwd at the Garden tonight will help him "pull out" of the "red," but he has made it plain that this is the first and last "Bunion Derby"—at least as far as he is concerned.

DEATH TRUCK DRIVER ACQUITTED BY JURY

Abraham Morgan, 17, of Douglas street, was acquitted of involuntary manslaughter in a sealed verdict in Criminal Court before Judge George V. Moore. He was tried for the death of Louis Finegold, 68, of Hobart street, killed by a truck at Phillips and Murray avenues, May 2, 1927.

"MISS PITTSBURGH"

This is "Miss Pittsburgh, Jr." if you please, the little Hazelwood lady, Mercedes Palmer, who sings, dances and does comedy stuff. Y'know. Motion picture playhouse managers interested in the movie ball selected her.

BETTY JANE BROOKS

'MISS PENNSYLVANIA'

And this, you guess, is "Miss Pennsylvania, Jr.," otherwise Betty Jane Brooke, Crafton. She's a toe and acrobatic dancer, too.

This, if you will, is "Junior Fashion Queen of Pittsburgh." She's Dorothy Wenzell, Mt. Oliver. She looks, they say, like a certain movie actress. Guess who, if you like.

Jones Is Made M. E. Bishop

International News Service.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 26.—The Rev. E. Stanley Jones, of Sitapur, U. P. India, internationally known lecturer, writer and evangelist, was elected bishop by the Methodist General Conference last night.

The session of the conference at which Dr. Jones was elected was declared by observers present to have been the greatest in 50 years and one of the most stirring in all religious history.

Sharing honors with Bishop-elect Jones today is a tiny, almost childlike, Korean girl, Miss Helen Kim, dean of Ewha College, Seoul.

Miss Kim, in one of the greatest and most heart-touching speeches ever delivered before a religious body, broke the deadlock that for 19 ballots had gripped the conference.

She saved her home area—Seoul—from being merged with the Philippines.

She brought about the withdrawal of the Rev. Lewis O. Hartman of Boston and of the Rev. Joseph M. M. Gray of Scranton, Pa., both receiving ballot after ballot, an almost identical number of votes. Her speech elected Dr. Jones.

And she herself received an ovation the like of which has been tendered no other person—not even the bishops elect—at this general conference.

The vote for Dr. Jones totaled 560 out of 778 ballots cast. Only 519 were necessary to elect.

LANDLORD FINDS NEW TENANT DEAD IN BED

Stephen Senes, proprietor of a rooming house at 520 Second avenue, notified police last night that he had found Michael Danko, 60 a boarder, dead in bed. The man had engaged a room there several days ago. The body was removed to the morgue where it was said death was due to natural causes.

Keep Pledge, Go Home Rogers Ask Congress

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 26.—News of the day. Congress has promised the country that it will adjourn next Tuesday. Let's hope we can depend on it. If they do, it will be their first promise they have kept this session. If they only hadn't promised it there might be more grounds for hope.

Will Rogers.

They just distributed $225,000,000 of Andy's hard earned savings. If your part of the country didn't get your share it's because your congressman didn't take a bag with him.

Andy Payne of Claremore, wins foot race, but is liable to have to run back to Los Angeles to get his money.

They got Henry Ford running foot races now. He must have left home in one of his own. Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

"Curbstone lizards must stop molesting girls," said Magistrate A. D. Brandon, Morals Court, in sentencing George Doarr, 35, married, 1723 Mt. Joseph street, Carrick, to pay a fine of $50 or serve 30 days in jail for alleged improper behavior. Rose Wagner, 19, 900 Winnebago street, South Side, accused Doarr.

Liquor Ring Probers Recess Until May 31

HAVE YET TO HEAR 600

The Federal grand jury conducting the sweeping investigation of illicit liquor traffic in Pittsburgh adjourned yesterday afternoon until next Thursday when it will resume its probe to learn the identities of those responsible for bootleg liquor conditions now rampant in this city.

More than 600 witnesses were heard by the grand jurors since they convened May 7, and as many more are now under subpenas to appear for interrogation when the investigation is resumed. Yesterday about 60 saloonkeepers, bartenders, hotel men, proprietors of clubs and others from East End wards appeared before the grand jury.

The length of time some of them remained in the grand jury room indicated that considerable information was obtained by the inquisitors. More than 250 more persons from the East End, Homewood, Brushton, Squirrel Hill and Bloomfield are under subpenas to appear when the jury resumes its probe.

The grand jury has already devoted 13 full days and several night sessions to the liquor probe. Because of the large numbers of witnesses still to be heard no return by the jury is anticipated before June 8. While the jurors are enjoying their "vacation" government attorneys will go over the huge mass of testimony already given by witnesses and eliminate that which can have no bearing on contemplated indictments.

The government attorneys also give their attention to investigations by special government officers who are running down reports of attempts to intimidate government witnesses and to others who are believed to have committed perjury when appearing before the grand jury.

Esther Fabian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fabian, Moninger, near Houston (Pa.), has not been absent or tardy a day during eight years at McGovern. He finishes high school with 18 credits, two more than necessary, next month and will enter Carnegie Tech in the fall.

DIVERS FIND NO TRACE OF WOMAN

As the search for Mrs. Susan Cottingham, wife of Capt. George Cottingham of the towboat Helen C, enters its third day without any trace of her having been found, city detectives and police are giving credence to the theory that she probably was abducted. To further strengthen this supposition Capt. Cottingham disclosed that when Mrs. Cottingham left the Helen C to come ashore Wednesday night she had $80 in her possession.

Divers searched the Monongahela River bed in the vicinity of Liberty avenue and Short street for the woman's body. It was explained by divers that the body, if she had been drowned, could not possibly have been carried downstream on account of the absence of a strong current. No one in the vicinity of the river craft heard screams the night Mrs. Cottingham disappeared. Capt. Cottingham is of the opinion that she probably had been knocked unconscious and then carried away in an automobile.

RED CROSS AIDS HAIL STORM VICTIMS

GORDO, Ala., May 26.—(AP.)—Gordo today was the central relief base for approximately 200 persons left destitute in last Tuesday's hail storm which swept 600 square miles in West Central Alabama. Damage to crops was estimated at $500,000. Some hail stones were three inches in diameter.

Red Cross workers who made a hurried survey of the storm area, found none of the families had deserted their homes, although in virtually every case foodstuffs had been ruined by water and corn, poultry and live stock destroyed.

The immediate problem, workers said, was food and money for the sufferers. A large number of residents of the section have exhausted their means and supplies in replanting crops killed by rains and cold weather earlier in the season.

Hundreds of acres of forest were stripped of leaves and limbs by the terrific hail with a resultant heavy loss to timber property. Approximately 6,000 acres of corn was ruined by the hail stones. Sixteen thousand acres of cotton were laid waste.

Congressional aid has been asked.

DRAGNET OUT FOR FIVE IN OHIO KIDNAPING

By T. H. B. PATTERSON,
Staff Correspondent.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 26.—A dragnet has been spread over 40 Ohio cities in the search for five former residents of Youngstown suspected of the kidnaping of Beatrice Rosenbaum, 10, who disappeared from her home here almost two weeks ago. This was admitted early today by Police Chief J. J. McNichols who also stated that two more anonymous letters had been received by the Rosenbaum family yesterday.

The five being sought are all men and at one time or another have been accused of molesting young girls. Each of the men left Youngstown about the time of the kidnapping. One is in Cleveland and police there are watching his home and expect to arrest him soon, if additional evidence is unearthed.

Little could be learned last night or today regarding the two additional letters, as police guard the Rosenbaum home and refuse permit members of the family to discuss the case with newspaper representatives. It was known however that the letters came from two different towns, and that Youngstown detectives have left for those two places.

WIND STORM SWEEPS WEST VIRGINIA COUNTY

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., May 26.—(AP.)—Heavy wind tore the roof from the Norfolk and Western Railroad Station at Vivian, tore down telegraph and telephone lines, uprooted trees and wrecked many small buildings throughout McDowell county last night.

Whales' Appetite Cuts Supply of Food Fish

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 26 (AP.) — Destruction of food fishes by white whales is becoming a most serious problem to the inhabitants of the fishing villages along the northern coast of Quebec and Labrador, Dr. Georie M. Sutton, state ornithologist, wrote in a letter received at the offices of the Game Commission here.

The letter was dated Natashquan, Quebec. Dr. Sutton is starting on a trip through the Labrador wilds on a scientific expedition to study wild life.

Dr. Sutton reported sighting several schools of white whale, the Bellengak of the Eskimo, near the mouth of the St. Lawrence.

Trolley Crew Held For Speeding; Four Hurt

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., May 26.—(AP.)—At least four persons suffered injuries late last night when a Larksville street car bound for Wilkes-Barre jumped the tracks and imbedded itself in a dirt bank on State street, Larksville.

Members of the crew, who Larksville police say refused to give their names, were placed in Larksville lockup on a charge of reckless driving.

The four persons bruised and cut are: Helen Kane, 12; Anna Kilpatrick, 17, and Agnes Cooper, 18, of Larksville, and Vincent Tovlovich, 15, of Ashley.

Larksville police charge that the crew was speeding.

Ambulance Gets Second Patient By Collision

An ambulance conveying an injured man to the hospital picked up another as the result of a collision last night at Beechwood boulevard and Fifth avenue. Isaac Dillon of 325 Beech avenue, East Pittsburgh was driving the ambulance in which Cy Perkins, an employe of the Union Switch and Signal Company, was being taken to the West Penn Hospital. Alvey Meyers, of 756 Melbourne street was injured slightly when his car collided with the ambulance, and he was placed in the ambulance with Perkins and taken on to the hospital. Both drivers were arested later on reckless driving charges.

Pittsburgh As Others See Us

"Power, energy, wealth, human force . . . .
—these are the words that spring to my mind when I think of Pittsburgh."
—ADA COMSTOCK.

ADA COMSTOCK

ADA COMSTOCK, president of Radcliffe College, born in Moorhead, Minn., December 11, 1876. Educated at Smith College and Columbia University. Dean of women in University of Minnesota and later at Smith College. President of the American Association of University Women. President of Radcliffe since 1923. Resides in Boston, Mass.

Power, energy, wealth, human force and ingenuity—these are the words that spring to my mind when I think of Pittsburgh. Such a community gives great scope to women of intelligence, taste and idealism, since they are the spenders of the wealth which it accumulates. Its strength can express itself through them in beauty and in enlightened public service; and its materialism can be transmuted into practical Christianity. Nothing but the best education is good enough for the women who wield such power.

End 'Jaywalker' Drive

Pedestrian Week ends today. The "undertakers," who have been busy all week warning pedestrians at street crossings, were unusually active as the Saturday crowds swarmed downtown and Boy Scouts, also, were on the job.

The Scouts, co-opearating with traffic officers, demonstrated various measures, one of which was the instruction of pedestrians in crossing with traffic signals. A troop of scouts was stationed at Fifth and Smithfield streets and another at Fifth and Wood. The Scouts moved from corner to corner with the traffic and warned persons who insisted upon crossing between moving vehicles.

Tonight addresses will be made over Pittsburgh's radio stations by members of the Better Traffic committee.

This is an interior of the flower-banked foyer of the new structure, which compares in size and appointment with any bank in this area. Other banks and friends of the Carnegie officers sent flowers and congratulations at the opening.

STAGE AND SCREEN ACTIVITIES DETAILED IN PICTURES AND GOSSIP ABOUT PLAYERS

News of Amusements in Pittsburgh Theaters Mixed With Chat From Film Studios of Hollywood

Estelle Taylor to Make Film Before Appearing With Hubby, Jack Dempsey, in Stage Play

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate.)

LOS ANGELES, May 26.

ESTELLE TAYLOR doesn't believe in wasting time. There remain several weeks before Estelle and Jack, Hollywood's favorite "champeen," accompany Max Marcin to New York for rehearsals of "The Big Fight." Which, you remember, is the title of the Belasco stage play, which will open in Atlantic City before September. During the interim Estelle has determined to make a picture. And within the next day or so will sign up with either Columbia or Gotham.

If Estelle signs with Columbia her picture will be "Publicity," an original by Alyce Harris, a young New York newspaper woman, who asked Estelle to read the yarn during her recent stay in the East. If Gotham secures her services, it will be for the leading role in "The River Woman," the part which Alma Rubens was to have played had she not been cast for the role of "Julie" in "Show Boat." Joseph Hanaberry will direct.

"Publicity" is a "first story," and the girl who wrote it gets a double break insomuch as Estelle will not only play in the picture, but also will lend a hand in its adaptation for the screen. That is, of course, if Harry Cohn of Columbia gets her name on the dotted line.

"La Paiva," the United Artists' picture starring Lupe Velez, has been changed to "The Love Son." It will be produced with sound accompaniment, and a song written by Irving Berlin will be used as a theme throughout the picture. Thus far Lupe, William Boyd and Louis Wolheim have been selected. There is still a major part open for another girl.

The new Warner Brothers theater here continues to do a turnaway business. The current offering, "The Lion and the Mouse," is attracting particular attention because several long sequences have Vitaphone dialogue. The entire cast has a chance to talk: Lionel Barrymore, May MacAvoy, Buster Collier and Alec Francis. As might be expected, Barrymore, with voice trained for years in the theater, is by far the best. Francis, who also knows his stage, gets his lines over tellingly. Without Vitaphone, the picture could never have been made, for the story is not screen material. But with the sound device, it is just as interesting as it was when Charles Klein penned the lines in the dim and distant past.

Fanny Rice is due here any day now. She, too, will make it a Warner Vitaphone number which is tentatively titled "My Man."

Hollywood romances are not all confined to the daughters of the family. Nancy Smith, who insists that she is the mother of Dorothy Swan, although they look like sisters, modestly announces her marriage to Charles Sollars. The two were sweethearts as kids back in the Middle West. They will make their future home in Hollywood, where Mr. Sollars will continue his business as an oil operator. Dorothy Swan, you recall, is Mrs. Larry Semon, off the set.

Last-minute flash: Sue Carol will play the feminine lead in "Captain Swagger," opposite Rod La Rocque. E. H. Griffith will direct.

NEW BILLS IN THEATERS

In "The Baby Cyclone," the offering of the Nixon Players in the Nixon, opening Monday night, Harry Bannister, Katherine Wilson, Josephine Whittell, George Macready, Kathryn Card and Fred Sullivan all have prominent roles.

"Mary's Other Husband," which opens in the Pitt Monday night, is a very "dressy" play, calling for an elaborate display of dinner clothes, sport togs, chic morning wear and even snappy "lounge" apparel.

"The Play Girl," starring Madge Bellamy as a shop girl who craves clothes and a life of ease, will be the screen attraction in the Davis next week. Ida May Chadwick and her girls will head the stage bill.

Barbara Bedford and Malcolm MacGregor, in "The Port of Missing Girls," will be the Stanley screen attraction next week. John Steel, Zeigfeld Follies tenor, will be an extra added attraction in the stage presentation.

One of the strangest professions is that of Bert Nagle in next week's stage revue in the Penn, "Kat Kabaret." He plays the role of a comedy tomcat. On the screen will be Corinne Griffith in "The Garden of Eden."

Jean Hersholt plays the title role in "Alias the Deacon," the screen feature at the Aldine next week. Pepit, clown, is one of the features of the vaudeville bill.

"Irish Black Bottom" is one of the dancing features in "Bare Facts," which will be presented next week in the Academy.

The split week policy in the Harris begins Monday and there will be a complete change of bill each Monday and Thursday. For the first half of the week the star attraction will be Harry Carey, famous screen player, in a personal appearance.

Bebe Daniels, in her new picture, "Fifty-Fifty Girl," will be the photoplay feature at the Grand next week.

"The Escape," Virginia Valli's latest photoplay, is announced for the Olympic next week.

In the Sheridan Square next week the vaudeville will have Bessie Rempel and company. The two screen features will be Virginia Valdi in "The Escape" and Madge Bellamy in "The Play Girl."

FREED OFFICER TO PAY COSTS

Andrew Wesloski, of 150 Forty-fourth street, a plainclothes patrolman, was acquitted of aggravated assaut and battery but ordered to pay the costs by a jury yesterday in Criminal Court before Judge George V. Moore.

Raymond Spangler, 20, of Braddock, and Nicholas E. Keil, 21, of Swissvale, alleged they were attacked by Wesloski about midnight February 10 on Second avenue near Lock No. 1 and that he beat them with a blackjack. They said they were helping an intoxicated friend home. The policeman said he had been on a passing car when his attention was called to the three by passengers who suspected a holdup. He declared they attacked him when he attempted to arrest them and only fought in self-defense.

PARABLE OF WICKED HUSBANDMAN

Sunday School Lesson Mark 12:1-12; 13:1-37

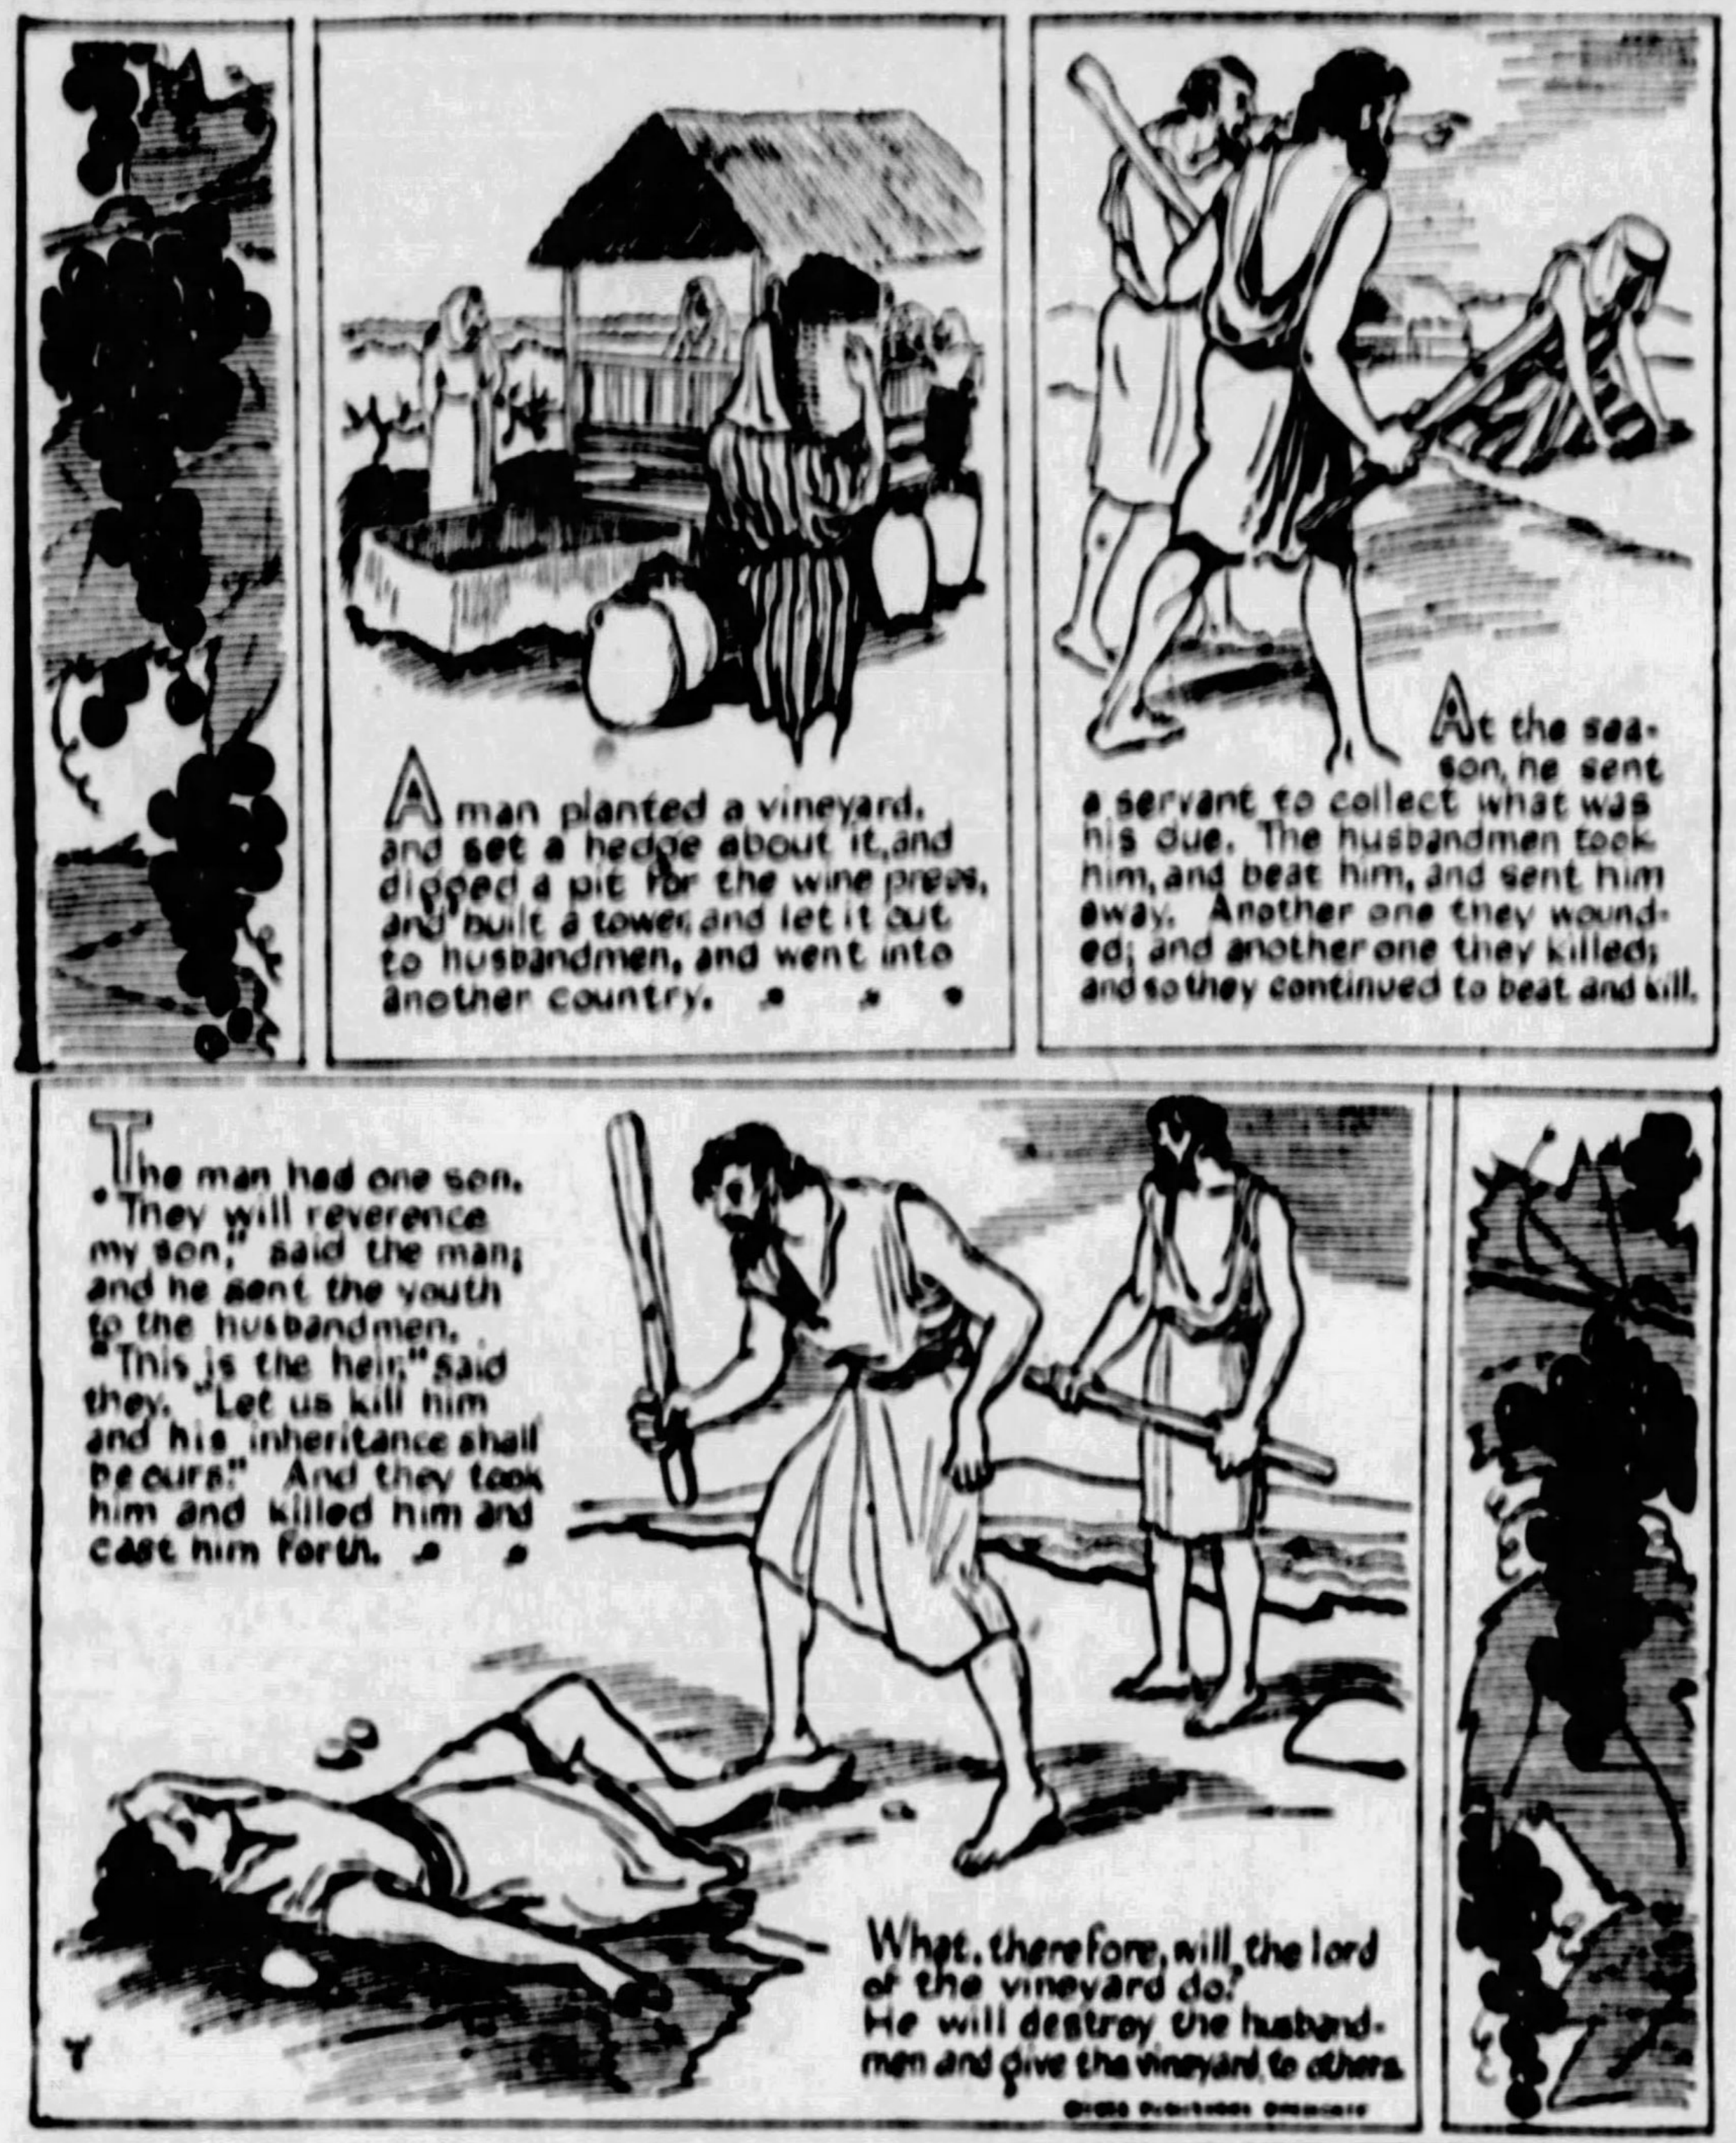
By { Harlowe R. Hoyt
Walter Scott



A man planted a vineyard, and set a hedge about it, and digged a pit for the wine press, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into another country.
At the season, he sent a servant to collect what was his due. The husbandmen took him, and beat him, and sent him away. Another one they wounded; and another one they killed; and so they continued to beat and kill.
The man had one son. "They will reverence my son," said the man; and he sent the youth to the husbandmen. "This is the heir," said they. "Let us kill him and his inheritance shall be ours!" And they took him and killed him and cast him forth.
What, therefore, will the lord of the vineyard do? He will destroy the husbandmen and give the vineyard to others.

VOGEL GOT CASH, RECEIVER SAYS

Why did George J. Vogel, Avalon, chain grocery owner, disappear last September and baffle a country-wide search until December 12? When he came home the question was not answered. Neither his brothers, of the Vogel Company, nor his wife would tell. His high school son had died during his absence and there were no others to speak.

Suit has just been filed in Common Pleas Court by Frank W. Pfordt, receiver of Vogel Brothers Company, against George J. Vogel for $5,180, which he says in a statement of claim filed with the suit, was appropriated by the defendant from funds of the company without knowledge of the other officers of the company.

The largest sum, $2,685, he says, was obtained September 12, just before Vogel disappeared, borrowed by Vogel on a life insurance policy on his own life made with Vogel Brothers as the beneficiary. The receiver says the money was obtained in a manner unknown to him.

Speaker

R. W. SHRUM

Chaplain Reuben W. Shrum, lieutenant commander, United States Navy, assigned to President Coolidge's yacht, speaks Sunday morning at Memorial Day service, Shadyside Presbyterian Church. Veterans of all American wars will participate.

OUTING VANDAL DENOUNCED

The Garden Club of Allegheny County has asked the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph to print the following:

"Now that the real springlike summer weather seems to be with us, we will be planning week-end motor trips into the country. Let us with a sense of patriotism realize how beautiful our country is as God gave it to us—woods filled with magnificent trees and carpeted with lovely flowers and shrubs. Splendid highways running like ribbons through these hills and valleys, permitting us to enjoy them to our hearts' content.

"But what do we so often find? Highways littered with picnic papers, tin cans and other rubbish, huge signs obstructing our views of the beautiful and often erected at intersecting highways, causing a menace to life.

"And where are the forest trees and shrubs and wild flowers? Burned by a carelessly left picnic fire or a thoughtlessly tossed smoldering cigaret end. The shrubs and flowers ruthlessly stripped and uprooted.

"Why can we not prove ourselves to be "good stewards" of our wonderful heritage and try to protect our countryside?"

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Social Leaders Arrange Reception for Gen. Bullard as Aid to Wood Leprosy Memorial

MORE and more of our local society women are interesting themselves in the Leonard Wood Memorial for the Eradication of Leprosy, it would appear. Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson is chairman of the women's committee here, you remember, and since she announced her aides last Sunday, 15 more names have been added, I understand. Mrs. William R. Blair, Mrs. George C. Burgwin, Jr., Mrs. William B. Schiller, Mrs. Simon Patterson, Mrs. John O. Miller, Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Mrs. George W. Laughlin III, Mrs. Grant Curry, Mrs. Morgan B. Schiller, Mrs. Marcus W. Stoner, Mrs. Lawrence N. Murray, Mrs. Roger Knox, Mrs. Margaret S. Gray, Mrs. Enoch Rauh and Miss Eleanor McCallam are the additional members of the committee.

Mrs. Johnson is giving a reception at her house in Forbes street on Monday night for Mrs. H. Windsor Wade and Gen. and Mrs. Robert Lee Bullard, who are touring the country on behalf of the memorial, and her committee will, of course, assist her. James M. Magee is general chairman in Pittsburgh, and yesterday afternoon his wife gave a tea for the women's committee in her home. Each woman pledged herself to call on 10 persons during the coming week to interest them in the memorial, and since, in all, there are 50 members, the results should be gratifying.

A number of local people who are interested in gardening were entertained at luncheon yesterday in McCreery's by Ralph Flinn, I hear, so that they might meet Mrs. George E. Hill, of New York, who is the special representative of the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild. Most of the guests were members of the local branch of the guild, of which Mr. Flinn is president, and they were much interested in what Mrs. Hill had to say concerning the work in New York. There, she said, "Tiny Tim" gardens have been established to the number of more than 1,000, to teach children about gardening.

Contributions of flowers and fruit have been distributed in generous quantities to the poor and shut-ins, I understand. Pittsburgh society women as well as the owners of smaller flower gardens send contributions to the guild, and, in many cities the Junior League also assists in gathering and distributing the flowers. The local station for this work opens for the summer season about July 1, I have been told.

A party given yesterday in Sewickley was that of Elizabeth Wardrop, who gave a luncheon in her home in Academy avenue for two girls who were married not long ago. They were Mrs. Calvin Wells, the former Martha Byrnes, and Mrs. William Galbraith, who was Katherine Clapp before her wedding. Twelve guests were there and the luncheon table was decorated with spring flowers. Mrs. Wells, by the way, was guest of honor at another party during the week. On Thursday, Katharine Walker, daughter of the William Walkers, of Shields, gave a luncheon in the Allegheny Country Club for her.

Judge and Mrs. William A. Way are going back to their home in Southern Pines, N. C., today, I understand. They have been visiting the Thomas Pattersons at their home in Shields for the past week, you know.

There are other visitors in the valley, too. Mrs. Howard Crosby Renwick, of Forest Hills, is at the home of her sister, Mrs. Royal S. Goldsbury, of Shields, and Mrs. Aldin Melliere Nevin, of Philadelphia, has been visiting Miss Anne and Miss Marie Nevin, of Chestnut street. Mrs. Nevin is going back home tomorrow, I believe, and another visitor who went home this week was Miss Nella Scrase, of London, who had been visiting Mrs. Franklin T. Nevin, of Hopkins street, for a fortnight. She left on Tuesday. An arrival tomorrow will be Barbara Bell, of Minneapolis, who is going to visit Marguerite Booth, of Grant street.

An engagement in which you will be interested has been announced in Greensburg. It is that of Katharine Whitten, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Charles E. Mr. Mellor was educated at Culver and the University of Pittsburgh, and his fiancee is a Baldwin School girl and a graduate of Wellesley College and the Carnegie Library School here.

A dinner for 26 followed the ceremony in the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Sandes are taking an eastern trip and after June 15 will be at home in Swissvale. NOVEL PROGRAM ENDS COLLEGE CLUB SEASON

Without a doubt the College Club had its most unusual program with which to close the season yesterday. Travesties on every department of club work and some phases of its history, each one cleverly written and uproariously presented, were all made to fit into the chief burlesque, which was the "publication" of a magazine, "Kollege Klub Kikks or the Inocuous Home Enlightener." This central theme was, of course, a take-off on the club's movement to eliminate undesirable periodicals, which has resulted in the formation of the Better Magazines Council of Allegheny County.

A huge magazine with an ultra modernistic cover design stood upon the improvised page and, when opened, disclosed the program as well as the entrance for the actors. First was portrayed the original board meeting, with the first president, Mrs. A. A. MacLachlan, overcome by her parliamentary responsibilities. One or two other original members participated, all wearing the costumes of two decades ago. Then Miss Ida Allerton gave a screamingly funny monologue against the din of steamboat whistles and railroad trains, which had, in reality, been a determining factor in the club's moving from its downtown location to the present one. Next came the selling of the bonds, $22,500 worth, to finance the new Craig street clubhouse. The College Club Quartet, in which Mrs. F. F. Rohrer was a red-headed Irishman, and Mrs. Frederick B. Chalfant, a Bowery boy, was another richly humorous bit, while one of the most ingenious numbers was the parental education burlesque in which Mrs. Harold Derrance and a group of enthusiasts discussed "psychocurvicism." Mrs. Thomas McCance Mabon contributed an amusing "helpful hints" monologue, with the assistance of Miss Eleanor Grier, and Miss Suzanne Beatty read a poem by Miss Anna Richey. Mrs. George McDonald and several others staged a burlesque on the club's drama work, the "staff" of the magazine closing the program as they had opened it.

Mrs. Horace Forbes Baker, Mrs. Kenneth Cunningham, Mrs. Edgar R. Cate and Mrs. H. B. Wassell were responsible for the entertaining afternoon. The clubhouse was beautifully decorated with a profusion of garden and wild flowers and there was, of course, the usual tea to round out the meeting. Mrs. James M. Graham, Jr., the new president, announced a gift from Mrs. David M. Kirk of about 300 volumes on the drama for the club library, and Mrs. Kirk was present to receive the applause and appreciation of the members.

Another club rounded out its season when the Crafton Woman's Club held its closing meeting yesterday afternoon in the Craft Club rooms. Mrs. A. D. Robb, the outgoing president, was leader and under her direction the members witnessed a rhythmic exhibition which Miss Pauline Denny, of Carnegie Institute of Technology, presented. Taking part were several junior music students, among them Eleanor Moser, Olive Dickinson, Albert Sehn, Jr., Thomas Ebbert, Vera Graham, Dorothy Fritsch and Ann McDonough. The exhibition was a demonstration of a new sort of musical experience in which the children are said to be given an immediate insight into the elements of composition.

The club's yearly reports were heard and a tea followed, with Mrs. L. G. Stone as chairman of hostesses, assisted by Mrs. F. A. Strassler, Mrs. J. L. Stoughtenburgh, Mrs. R. R. Stuart and Mrs. D. S. Taylor.

Election of officers was held, a talk on the American Indian was heard and an exhibition of lamp shades seen by the Housekeepers at their meeting in the Congress clubhouse yesterday. The election resulted as follows: President, Mrs. H. Jobe Sedwick; vice presidents, Mrs. B. D. Scott and Mrs. Louis Kemler; recording secretary, Mrs. H. P. Schremp; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. L. McClaran; parliamentarian, Mrs. C. H. Brautigan; directors, Mrs. J. C. Armor, Mrs. James E. Bay, Mrs. M. E. Fellows, Mrs. William Finlay and Mrs. George Gillespie. Mrs. E. D. Cawley gave the talk and the exhibit was conducted by Miss Mae Gilbert. Mrs. Beatrice Conti was hostess. Mrs. Scott is taking reservations for the annual luncheon, which will be held June 14 at the Pines.

Memorial Day services in the Twenty-seventh Ward will be held at 10 o'clock in Legion Park, under auspices of the Woman's Community Association, with Mrs. Harry Miller and Mrs. Charles E. Gilchrist in charge. Allegheny Post, American Legion, will direct the flag raising, and Commander Oscar I. Harter will deliver the address. Patriotic songs will be sung by school children of the John Morrow, Woods Run, Halls Grove and Horace Mann schools. George B. Rudolf, past vice commander of the Department of Pennsylvania, G. A. R., will place a wreath upon the monument, and the exercises will close with "taps," sounded by the buglers.

The Carnegie Woman's Club closed its twenty-sixth year yesterday with a meeting in the Woodville United Presbyterian Church, at which Miss Mary S. Ingram was hostess. The lives of Dr. Alexis Carroll, Dr. John Brashear, Hugh Walpole, Mozart, and Henry Bessemer were the subjects of papers by Mrs. Walter Yourd, Mrs. D. F. Anderson, Mrs. Chalmers Davies, Mrs. C. A. Foster (whose paper was read by Miss Mary Harris) and Mrs. D. C. Walker, Mrs. J. W. Gilbert reading the latter's paper. Mrs. Yourd gave soprano solos, the club trio sang, with Miss Margaret Mansfield accompanying for both, Miss Mary Metzgar gave piano numbers and Miss Margaret Ramsey contributed readings. An informal tea followed the program.

A business meeting of Pittsburgh Assembly No. 47, Order of the Beauceant, was held yesterday in the assembly hall, Penn avenue. Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Ascalon Commandery, Knights Templar, gave a program of entertainment and tea followed under the chairmanship of Mrs. George Henning.

Gelston; Mrs. Elizabeth Lewellyn, superintendent of the Brookville Memorial Home, and Mrs. Mabel P. Hyslip and Miss Nettie Baxter, home board members. The regular meeting on June 13 has been advanced to June 6.

WHO IS 'JACK?' 13-YEAR PUZZLE

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

BEAVER, Pa., May 26.—Who is "Jack?" And from whence did he come? Is he a millionaire, or a pauper. A prince of the blood or a poor laborer. "Jack" doesn't know. Nobody here knows.

This big, kindly, soft-spoken fellow who has been an inmate of the Beaver County Home since April 15, 1915, is a victim of that strange and baffling disease known to medical science as amnesia. To the layman it is "loss of memory."

He has the speech and the manner of a man from the Middle West. And when reminded of this yesterday and asked if he remembered large wheat fields and rolling plains his light blue eyes took on a puzzled look and he mumbled, rubbing his forehead:

"Threshers—big fields. I like horses and machinery. I drive the horses here as though I had been doing it all my life. Yes, I may have drifted from the West."

When asked how old he was "Jack" shook his head:

"There is one date that stands out in my mind. It is March 15. The number 26 seems to go with it. Sometimes I think I must have been 26 years old on March 15, the year I was picked up when I lost my memory. That would make me 49 years old now—and I look about that old."

The superintendent of the home, Miss S. E. Springer, told of how "Jack" used to cut sticks about a foot long and juggle them when he first went to the home. He used to dance and sing when he did this. Sometimes she says she thinks he might have been a performer. But he hasn't the manner of a member of the "profession."

"Jack" was asked if he was happy. His smile was instant.

"Oh, yes. But curious sometimes. I get to wondering if I have a mother and father—it seems to me my father is dead. I seem to remember a funeral. Then I wonder if I may have a wife and children worrying about me. But I don't think so. My memory is all gone."

When picked up in Chippewa township and taken to the New Brighton Hospital in the winter of 1915, "Jack" was near death from frozen feet and starvation. They found him with his feet sticking out of a strawstack.

This unfortunate (or perhaps fortunate, who knows) has proven so useful on the farm, for two and a half years, has paid him $10 a month, which is in trust for him in the bank.

He sings, too. He has a nice cheery voice, but is rather shy about demonstrating. Jack is about 5 feet 10 inches tall, has chestnut hair and a sandy mustache, light blue eyes and is slender, with large teeth in a kind looking face.

HE PAYS FOR CHICKENS WITH WORKHOUSE TERM

Ralph Douglas, Negro miner of Imperial, looking for a piece de resistance for a drinking party, May 15, decided on two chickens owned by James Long, a Negro neighbor, and just as the party guests were about to cook the birds Long came along with an officer and retrieved the chickens without their heads. Douglas was sent to the workhouse for three to six months by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen.

SHOT UP M'KEESPORT, GOES TO WORKHOUSE

Charles Clark, 38, once of Detroit, "fanned" Walnut street, McKeesport, with a revolver at 2 o'clock one morning early in March. Constable Al Marcus dodged a couple of bullets to make the arrest. Clark, pleading guilty in Criminal Court, said he was merely firing into the ground for no reason at all. Judge Joseph M. Swearingen sent Clark to the workhouse for seven months.

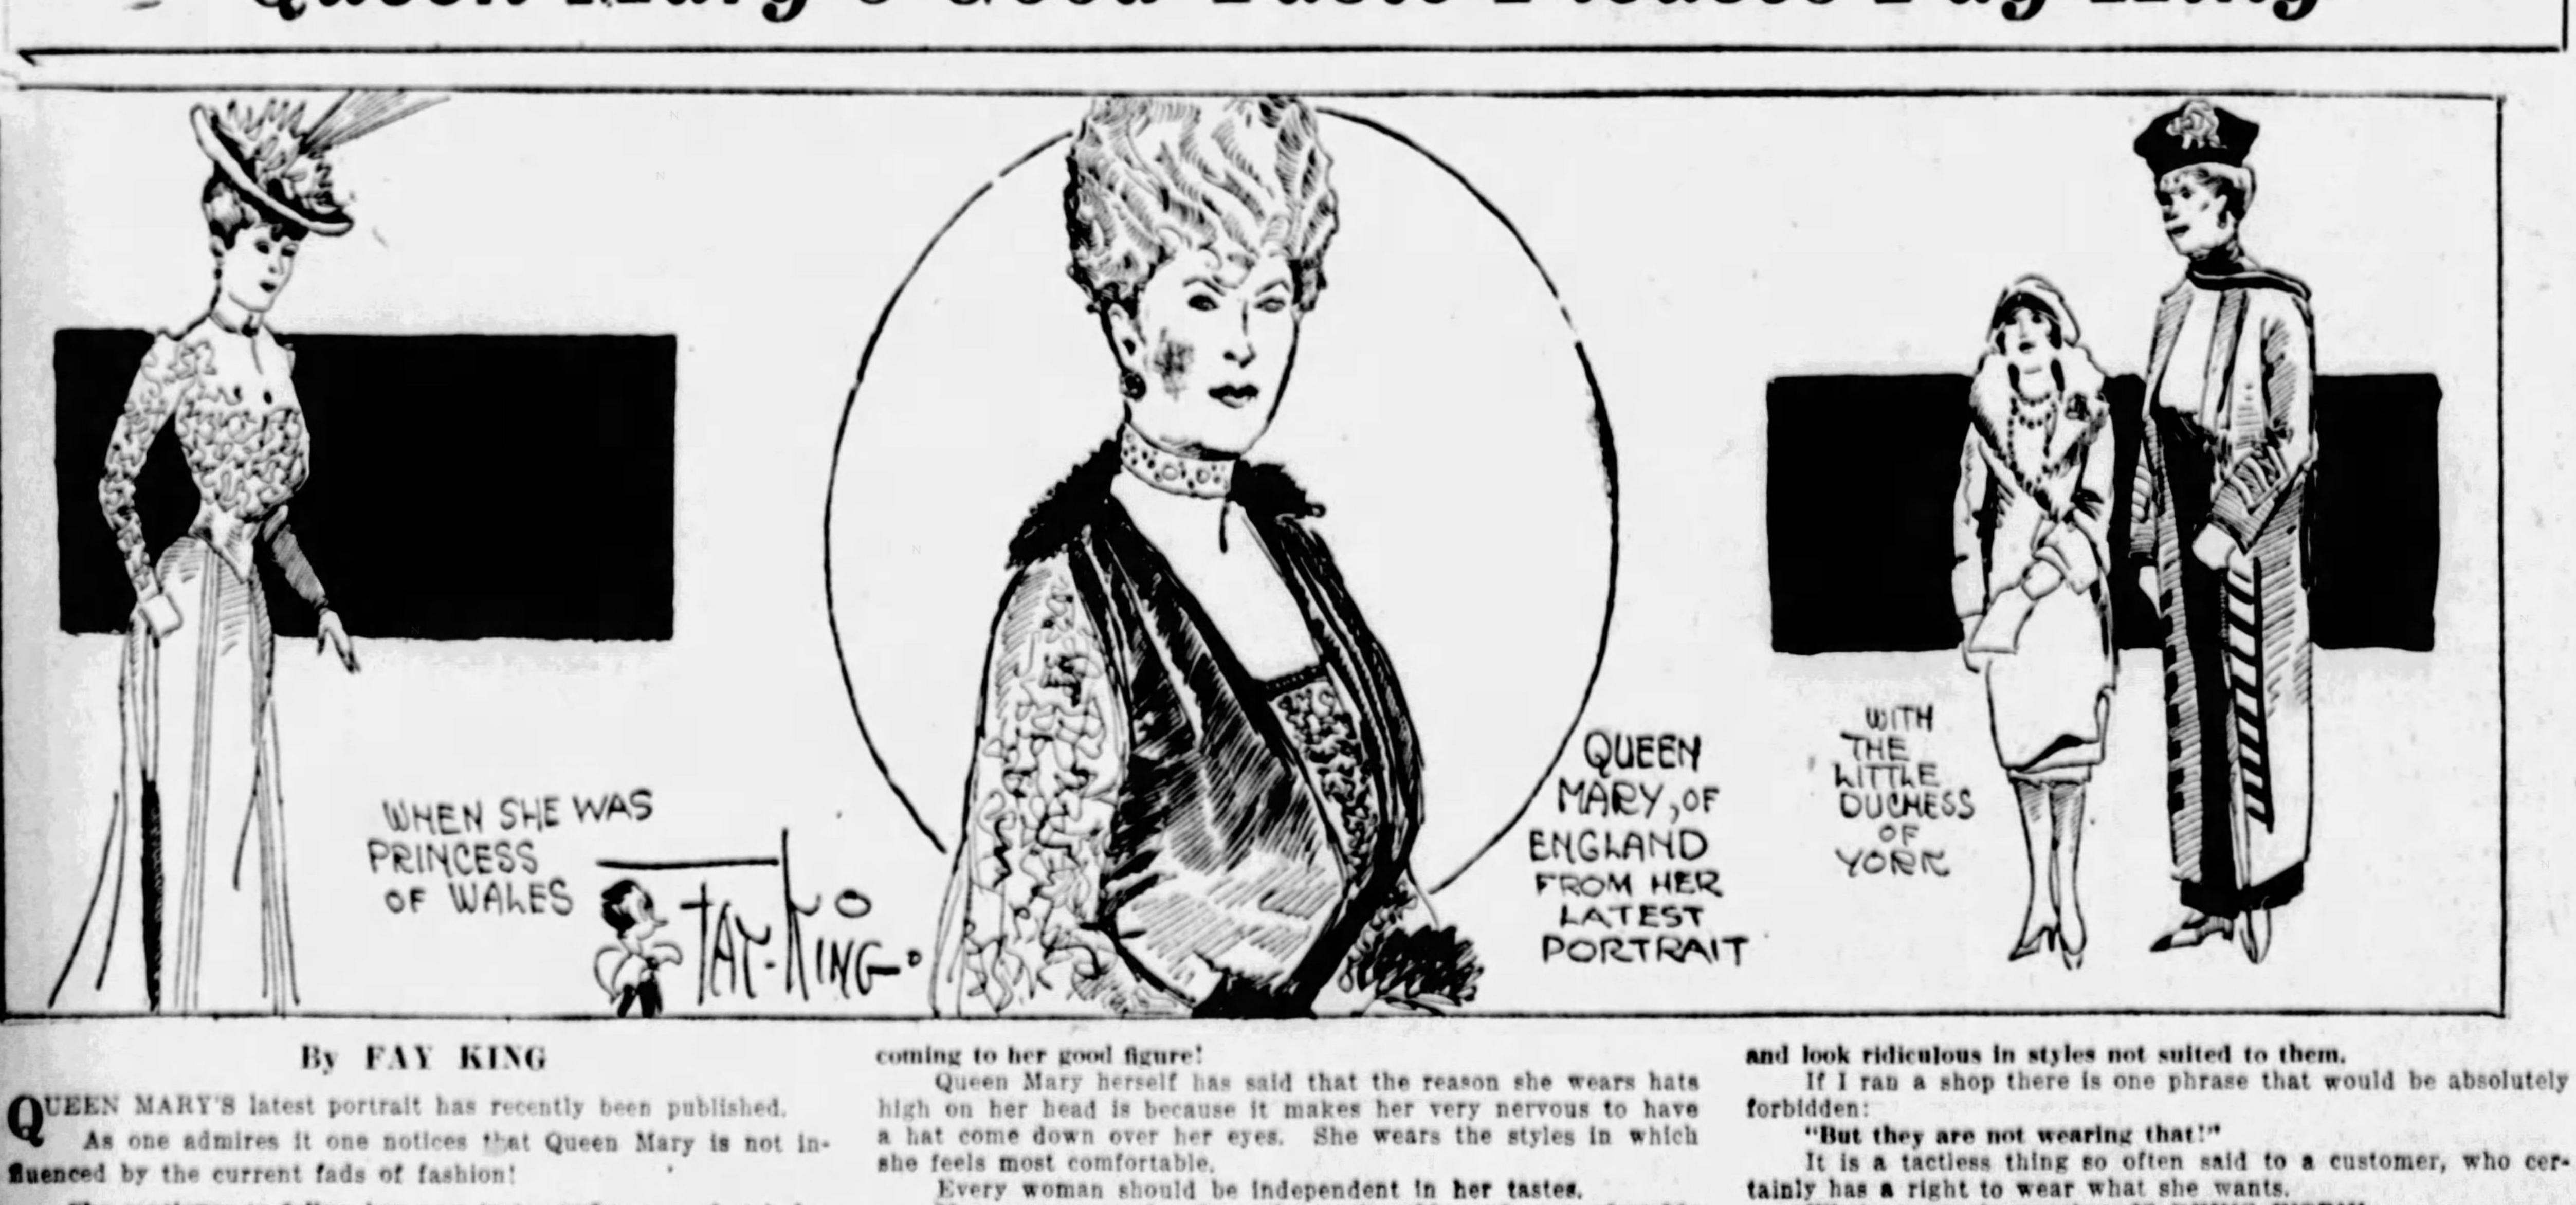
Queen Mary's Good Taste Pleases Fay King



WHEN SHE WAS PRINCESS OF WALES
FAY-KING
QUEEN MARY, OF ENGLAND FROM HER LATEST PORTRAIT WITH THE LITTLE DUCHESS OF YORK

By FAY KING

QUEEN MARY'S latest portrait has recently been published.

As one admires it one notices that Queen Mary is not influenced by the current fads of fashion!

She continues to follow her own tastes and wears what is becoming to her good figure!

Queen Mary herself has said that the reason she wears hats high on her head is because it makes her very nervous to have a hat come down over her eyes. She wears the styles in which she feels most comfortable.

Every woman should be independent in her tastes.

Many women make themselves miserable and uncomfortable and look ridiculous in styles not suited to them.

If I ran a shop there is one phrase that would be absolutely forbidden:

"But they are not wearing that!"

It is a tactless thing so often said to a customer, who certainly has a right to wear what she wants.

What anyone is wearing, IS BEING WORN!

U. S. NAVY BAND AND DANCE BAND TO BROADCAST

NETWORK features to be heard over KDKA tonight will be a program by the United States Navy Band at 8 o'clock and music by the Mediterranean Dance Band at 9 o'clock. Ivy Scott, soprano and comedienne, will be featured with the latter band. Miss Scott will sing "He Gave Them All the Ha-Ha." Selections by the band, under the direction of Hugo Mariani, will include "Hello, Montreal," "Whisper Sweet, Whisper Low," "Querida" and "Moments With You."

The Bonnie Laddies, a trio of vocalists, whose fame in broadcasting circles is firmly established, will be heard through the Red Network, including WCAE, at 8 o'clock. They will be assisted by Alfred Evans, saxophonist. Their program will be all popular in character, with "You're the First Thing I Think of in the Morning," "Ready for the River," and "That Brand New Model of Mine," as the favorites.

"The Strollers," local radio entertainers, will broadcast a new play, "Heredity Versus," over WCAE at 7:00. Mae Sweeney will direct. The author of the play, Mrs. Sarah C. Pettit, is well known in Pittsburgh club circles. While this is her first radio play, she has had several others produced at the Twentieth Century Club and at East Liberty Carnegie Library. Her play, "Hour by the Fountain," will be produced at Seton Hill College, under the direction of Mrs. Mary Sherrill, in the near future.

Running Water Not Always Pure

ACCORDING to the United States Public Health Service, the idea that running water is necessarily pure is false and dangerous. A polluted stream would have to flow several mile before the water regained its purity.

Love Loss Calls for Courage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IS IT better, as the poet claims, to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all?

This question, in various forms recurs over and over in problems brought to my attention.

Much of youth is saddened by unrequited or lost love. At some period it comes into the experience of nearly everyone. Most men and women, it is true, recover in time from love that is not returned and find happiness and success in marriage. Only now and then do lasting tragedy and disaster result. But the experience of unrequited love is usually acutely unhappy while it lasts.

What is the solution of this riddle? Is there any wise way of lessening the pain and unrest of hopeless affection?

SOME philosophers suggest forgetting as the remedy. This is especially maddening to the lovesick youth or girl, who does not wish to forget, and invariably delights in clinging to grief and disappointment. The weakness in the counsel to forget lies in the fact that the effort of trying to forget a circumstance fixes it more firmly in memory. To try to forget is a good way to remember.

It seems to me, good sportsmanship is a requisite in winning or losing in love as in all other departments of life. Determine, if you must lose, to do so without whining or self-pity.

Of course, hopeless love hurts. But the history of humanity proves that a certain amount of suffering is inevitable if we are to grow, learn and progress.

THE other day a beautiful young woman, engaged to a young man deeply in love with her, eloped with another man.

"He has won a wonderful girl," was the only comment of the disappointed lover. There were no reproaches or recriminations. That man possesses the secret of ultimate success. He is a good loser.

Last season, a certain famous novelist fell deeply in love with a young lady of charm, wealth and exalted social position. For a time, the lady seemed to return his affection. Then quite suddenly she became engaged to an acquaintance they both knew well—a foreigner of title.

The novelist was hard-hit. He retired broken-hearted to his farm and fought his battle out with himself. Finally, he emerged from retirement his own cheerful self, announced that both young people were his good friends, and gave a charming party for them.

GIRLS are quite as capable as men of enduring the disappointments of love with courage and sportsmanship. It is useless to try to inveigle a man who has had every chance to become interested in you and has not responded to the opportunity. But there are other men—other worthwhile, delightful men. And unless you permit tears to blur your eyes, you will see in one of them your golden opportunity.

A girl I know was obliged recently to break her engagement. She is young and attractive, has a good home, devoted brothers, sisters and parents. The man who asked her to release him was never really in love with her and is unworthy of her. Yet month after month, Doris has moped and wept and hoped she might go into a decline.

"I have nothing to live for," she sobs.

"You have me," her mother replies, wistfully.

Fortunately, time is going to heal this hurt as it does nearly all wounds. Doris, in spite of herself, will begin to take a fresh interest in life—and men.

WHEN you see a young woman with a new light in her eyes, buying a smart hat, trying the latest fashion in bobs—"perking up" in general—the chances are she is falling in love, taking a heart-break with sportsmanship and courage, or else just naturally getting over an unhappy love affair.

Physicians will tell you that their patients who recover quickest are those who are courageous and hopeful and want to get well.

Why should you pity yourself, even though your love is not returned? To love is in itself a joy. It is not wrong to love anyone in the world. But it is wrong to feel you have the right to wish or try to possess what you love. None can possess any other soul.

So let yourself love freely, generously, happily. Even broken-hearted love gives thrilling joy. Only when you love, do you really live.

Take the disappointments of love with sportsmanship and courage, and rejoice with all your heart and soul when it happens that your love is requited.

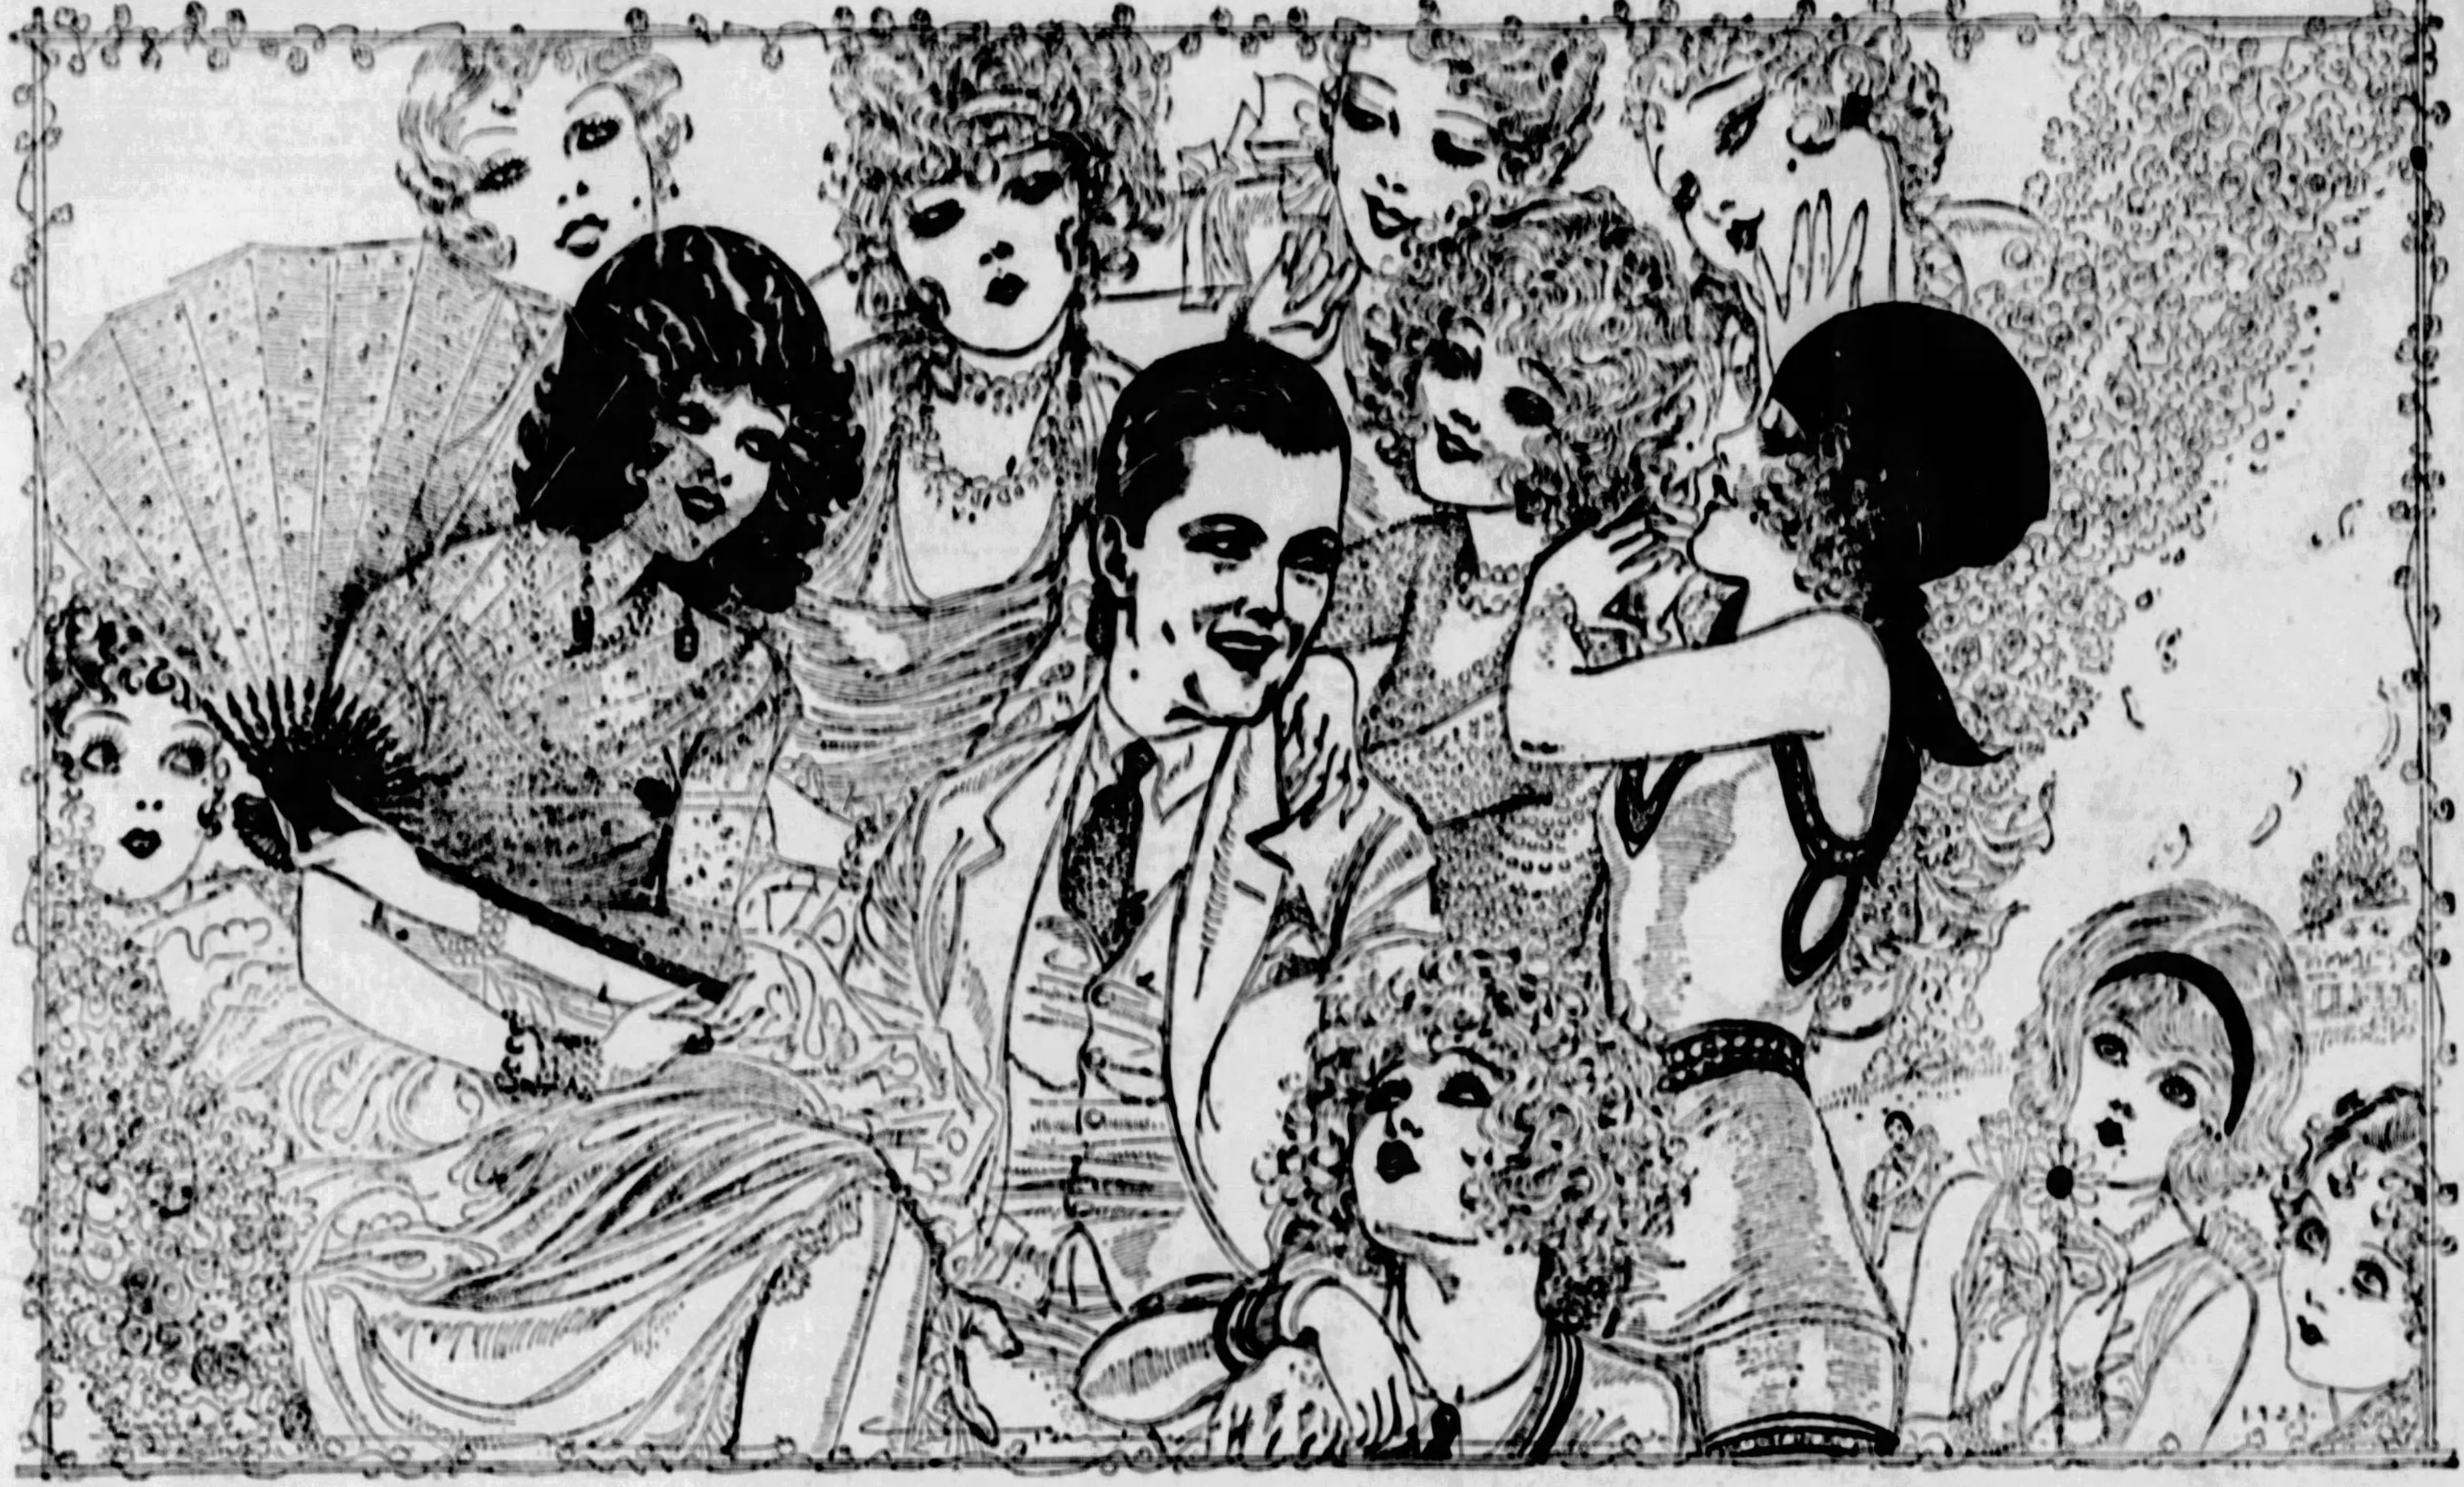
Stuffed Tomato Salad

Scald, drain and peel the needed number of good shaped tomatoes of uniform size, then chill them. When ready to use hollow out the stem end with a sharp teaspoon and set them on lettuce leaves. Stuff with a grated onion, a half cupful of chopped celery, a half cupful of broken shrimp, a large sweet pickle cut fine, pepper, a teaspoonful of sugar, a little salt, and enough heavy mayonnaise to moisten. Fill the tomatoes then mask with mayonnaise, dust with a little paprika and put a stuffed olive on top of each.

A PERFECT VACATION

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



A Young Man's Idea of a Perfect Vacation—Or Heaven

AT A CERTAIN age—of uncertain dreams and towering ambitions—every-day life is a mixture for Bill. His days are a scramble of work, wild plans, strenuously exercising his soul and his springy young body. He argues and enthuses and propounds and solves a thousand puzzles a day—and girls are only a part of that day.

BUT—when he slumps back in his chair and begins to wonder where and how he is going to use a vacation—and what Heaven could be like—then, at his age, the fulfillment that he sees is decidedly feminine!

Wherever the landscape is thick with girls, there will be a perfect vacation be; whether it is in the scented pine woods of the North or the dazzling beaches of the far South.

And Heaven the same. Life and the work-day do not have time enough for girl faces and their laughter, their charming company—but vacations and Heaven to young Bill's notion will be where and when he has plenty of time for them—and plenty of them to smile on him; whether the landscape has a vacation look or the well-known jasper walls and golden street.

The Daily Dip in Sea For Charm

By MARIA JERITZA

MANY a girl is thrilled by the thought that the bathing season will begin within a few days now, even at the more Northern beaches.

Have you been looking over your last year's bathing suit, wondering whether it will be out of date this season? Let me assure you, if the suit fits and is in good condition, it should do very well indeed, for fashions in bathing suits have changed very little, if any, since last summer. So you may be able to buy a pretty new beach coat or cape instead of a new suit or a gay beach umbrella, or a rubberized bag to carry your towels, comb and cold cream.

These accessories are just as necessary as a smart suit, to a woman who wishes to look her loveliest. A beach umbrella will enable you to bask in the warm sand and fresh air without acquiring sunburn or freckles.

Choose these accessories in shades that match, harmonize or contrast becomingly with the color of your bathing suit. It is especially wise to protect yourself from the sun by means of a beach wrap, especially on the neck and arms, where freckles are so conspicuous and sunburn seems unusually painful. Tan, of course, is a different proposition, for it is harmless and rather becoming to the average woman, giving her a wholesome, outdoor look.

In order to get only good from your dip, do not stay in the water more than 20 minutes. While you are in, keep active by swimming, diving or paddling about. When you come out of the water, toss about your big beach ball or medicine ball or practice setting up exercises a few moments until you are fairly warm and dry before you lounge in the sand.

To the girl who worries about hair on her limbs, I can only suggest that she ignore them if they are inconspicuous, and use the best depilatory she can find if they are ugly and make her self-conscious. There are cream depilatories to be had which are mild. Once in three weeks should be often enough to apply a depilatory. After removing it, always rub cold cream on your skin.

Swimming out-of-doors is a wonderful tonic to your health and beauty and it is great fun. I hope you will do lots of it this summer. I intend to live up to this advice, myself, for I have learned from experience that there is no better or more enjoyable way of laying up health and pep for a strenuous winter season than to take a swim every day in summer.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE PERFECT AGE

ALAS, my Daughter, this is an age of sad-eyed damsels; but be of good cheer. For there cometh unto every woman a day when she shall be happy and content with life and all the world.

* * *

Go to. A man hath "seven ages" but a woman is more consistent. For, having reached an age which pleaseth her fancy, she sticketh thereto; and neither calendars, nor time, nor earthquakes can budge her.

* * *

No damsel can be sixteen, forever; and a woman who is never over "twenty-seven" is as unconvincing as a blonde chorus girl's hair.

HELEN ROWLAND

But when a woman saith, "lo, I am THIRTY-NINE," who shall challenge her? For who knoweth when Indian summer cometh or when it shall pass? And, behold, Thirty-nine is the magic age at which all birthdays cease!

* * *

Yea, verily, it is the Perfect Age of Woman, when all her doubts and struggles and regrets are forgotten and the harvest of her Happiness is ripe.

* * *

When her charms are full-blown but not yet fallen away; when her heart and her emotions are seasoned but not embalmed. When her illusions are few but not yet dead; and when naught in all the world can perturb or astonish or dazzle her.

* * *

When her poise and wisdom make the unsophisticated damsel to appear as insipid as pink jelly, and her wit causeth the flapper's slang to seem gauche and raw.

* * *

When she may delight in all the privileges of middle-age and enjoy all the pleasures of youth.

* * *

When elderly lotharios no longer pursue her and cynical bachelors scorn to waste their time upon her; but young men hang garlands upon her door, and only the "desirables" are left upon her list.

* * *

When she may CHOOSE the color of her hair, and change it from season to season as her heart and her fancy may dictate.

* * *

When she can be equally happy with, or WITHOUT a man at her feet.

* * *

When sentimental conquests cease to be matters of life and death and become merely a pastime and a by-product.

When her beauty ceaseth to be the uncertain work of nature and becometh a work of Art.

* * *

When she looketh equally alluring in sport clothes or in exotic draperies and Oriental ear-rings or in a pink negligee.

* * *

When she hath ceased to yearn for "experience," to sigh for adventure, and to tremble lest she die without love.

* * *

Verily, verily, Youth hath its doubts and heartaches and disappointments. But for a woman of thirty-nine, life holdeth no shocks!

* * *

And it hath come to pass that there is no such thing as a "woman of forty!" Selah.

Words of Affection

By LUCY LOWELL

THERE are three in the family: the girl, her brother and the mother. And this family is one of whom everybody says "They get on well together."

Their dispositions are even and with no sharp quirks to cause upset. The girl and her brother have good positions and the money they bring in keeps a comfortable home and a comfortable car. Nothing ostentatious, but all homey and comfortable.

The mother is a marvelous cook and a typical home-maker, she sees that the house is spic and span and everything done for the welfare of the children.

As I say, they get along in perfect accord and understanding.

But without one visible sign of affection!

Never have I seen the girl kiss her mother good-by when she leaves the house. Never have I heard her tell her brother she thought him a "fine old thing" when he shows her one of the small, kindly attentions she takes as a matter of course. But, of course, neither does he give her any special word of thanks for things she does for him.

And sometimes I wonder if they are not missing a great deal. They get on so well, yet with a sort of emptiness in their friendship. I know they love each other, but why do they never tell each other so?

They would say, perhaps, that each of them is inarticulate and that it does not matter particularly since there is such perfect understanding.

But most of us are inarticulate in some degree, and I wonder why. We find it hard to speak the tender word, afraid of seeming sentimental. Yet if it's no more than to say "You're awfully fine and I love you," it would mean so much.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland, M.D.

Abuse of the Stomach Is Cause of Dilation

IF the organ is normal, the human stomach has a capacity of four or five pints. Under certain conditions it dilates so enormously as to have a capacity of 30 or 40 pints. There is one case on record where it reached 70 pints.

DR. COPELAND

Continued poor health from any cause manifests itself by lack of resistance of the body tissues. Muscular tone is reduced. Elasticity is lost just as a rubber band loses its life and snap. Anything, then, that results in impaired health, wasting of the tissues of the body and general lack of tone, may be followed by giving way of the tissues and stretching of the stomach walls.

Chronic inflammation of the lining of the stomach may prepare the way for this unpleasant condition. Such an inflammation is usually the result of overeating or over-drinking. Although not the only cause, by any means. Beer drinking used to be a fruitful cause for dilation of the stomach.

There are cases of acute dilation, the result of a single indulgence in an enormous meal. It is much more common, of course, to find the dilation coming on gradually, the result of long continued overeating.

There are cases where disease has obstructed the opening from the stomach into the intestine. As the growth or disease has progressed, the passageway has grown smaller and smaller. In consequence, the contents of the stomach have been dammed up and the walls of that organ have been more and more distended. In time, the elasticity of the stomach walls is lost and eventually the dilation is enormous.

The symptoms vary, but almost always there is dyspepsia, the patient complaining of discomfort in the stomach. In spite of this, however, he calls for food and never seems satisfied. He will eat till the stomach is filled and then he may vomit a great quantity of food and fluid.

One would expect the consumption of such enormous quantities of food to result in added flesh. As a matter of fact, however, little of the food is absorbed and the patient grows more and more thin and scrawny. Constipation, dryness of the body, limited urinary secretion, and lack of strength are characteristic.

The treatment is not pleasant, but it is immediately effective. Washing out the stomach quickly relieves the trouble. This procedure is done once a day.

There must be strict regulation of the eating habits of the patient. Small quantities of food are given and the meals should be taken more frequently than are required by healthy persons. Starch and fat foods are omitted. Sugar is taken in moderation. Liquids are cut down to the minimum.

Needless to say, fresh air, lots of sleep, and all the rules of simple living are indicated. Everything that builds up the general health will restore tone to the weak stomach walls.

With care of this sort recovery is to be expected.

For the Lovelorn

Tom

DEAR MISS GALE:

It is hardly necessary for me to tell you how wonderful your advice is, as I believe, you already know it. I often wanted to write to you about a few things, but it seems as though I'm just getting to the point of action. I just read about the Two Lovesick Pals in your column and they certainly did hand me a laugh. Thirteen years old and engaged—are their parents right? They should be given a good sound spanking. I can't conceive of a child of 13 having a love affair. You, Miss Gale, certainly gave them splendid advice, if they only take it. Here is my trouble: I have been going steady with a fellow for a year and a half. Up until very recently I loved him more than any one else. Now, things are different. I like him more than anyone else, but I don't love him. He always treated me nicer than anyone else ever did. I can't hurt him by telling him I don't love him when he asks me, for he asks me constantly. He claims he is so afraid of losing me. I am not fickle, but I have just changed and I have stopped loving him. But how can I tell him I want to have him as a friend, but that I don't love him? Please tell me this, Miss Gale! I will appreciate anything you can do for me. Do you think plumpness has anything to do with not being favored by the male sex? I have been wondering about that. Tell me that, too, please.

TOM.

You will hurt him far less by telling him how you feel now than by letting matters drag on this way. I am afraid you can't expect to have him for a friend, though. Extreme overweight is unattractive to most men, but plumpness is not, by any means.

Lover's Delight

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have read your column for some time and find your advice good to others. Now, here is what I would like to ask you. How old should a girl be before going out with fellows, and about how old should she be before marrying? There are two certain young men in the town where I live. I will call one D. and the other J. Now, as I am very bashful and so is D. I would like to have a date with D. some night, but there is one question I would like to ask you. Would it be all right for me to tell his brother J. to tell D. to come over and see me some night, as D. works till about 6:30 and I never get a chance to talk to him? How could I overcome bashfulness? And how could I become better acquainted with D., so he would ask me for a date? Thanking you,

LOVER'S DELIGHT.

A girl of 17 is old enough to go out with boys, but she should be some years older before thinking of marriage. Wait until this boy shows more interest in you before asking him to call. It is your privilege to invite him, of course, but it is best to be sure he really wants to call.

A Perfect Lady

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have just finished reading a letter in your column signed by the name Jack. It concerned me a lot. And I also want to congratulate you, Jack. I only wish there were many more like you. That is if you hold true to your letter. Young men say there are no decent girls and the girls say there are no decent men. Isn't it true, that one is just as scarce as the other? Men seem to have the idea that they can smoke, swear, drink, neck, etc., and at the same time be a gentleman. They call themselves perfect men. I call them cowards. If a man can do those things and be a gentleman, then so can a young girl do those things and be a perfect lady. It's no worse for one to do it than the other. Why should not a young man keep himself healthy, honest and clean, so as to someday be a fit father, as well as a girl should to be a fit mother? Did not God in his early revelations to his chosen people honor fatherhood as much as motherhood in his relations to the training of children? It doesn't seem as bad to see a boy smoking as it does a girl. It seems more natural for them to do it. They think it makes them a bigger man. But a boy who uses tobacco will gradually lose respect and courtesy for ladies. It sometimes drives them to drink. Someone said, 'A dead fish can float down stream, but it takes a live one to swim up stream.'' Any boy can float down the stream of life, have what he calls a good time in the world, live, die and never be missed. It takes a boy with a strong, healthy body, a sound mind, a pure heart, and clean life, brave, determined and true to make a perfect man. "Dare to be right! Dare to be true! Other men's feelings will never save you." I am only 16 and I do not pretend to know everything. But I do know that what I have said is true. Do you agree, Miss Gale? I am very thankful for a very dear, sweet mother. She has talked to me about such things since childhood. She's helped me wonderfully. I feel perfectly free to go to her at anytime. Someday when I meet the perfect man, I can truly say I will be

A PERFECT LADY.

I quite agree with you, my dear.

M. E. K.

DEAR MISS GALE:

Never before have I had any reason to come to you for advice, but I need some now and I need it quick. I have a problem ahead of me, which I would like you ot help me solve. Well, I have a brother 21 years old who keeps company with a girl that isn't "any good." How do I know this? Well, she keeps him at her house all night, searches his pockets for money, but usually gives it back to him, talks vulgarly to and with him and is awfully strong for the petting, in among my other sisters and brothers, who as I do, object to this very much. Jim gets good wages, $35 per week, and has a lovely roadster, which she drives. She encourages him to drink by giving him wine and whisky. Sometimes he doesn't come home until two and three in the morning. This worries mother very much, because she is afraid he will wreck his car and be injured. He takes her home from work every evening and doesn't get home to his dinner till everyone else is finished. We tell Jim he is making a great mistake by going with this girl; he keeps it up so much the more. I always am speaking to him about her and tell him what the people are saying but it's "no use." Your help will be appreciated by mother, dad, sisters, brothers, friends and myself.

M. E. K.

I know how badly you all must feel about this situation, my dear, but your brother is a grown man and apparently is very much in love. Do you imagine that he really hears anything you say against this girl? No doubt he knows what sort she is even better than you do, and it makes no difference. Taking matters into your own hands would only alienate your brother completely. And since your arguments have had no effect, why not change your tactics and refrain from it? He might change his mind of his own accord if he were not always being called on to defend this girl.

Don't Know What to Do

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been in love with a boy for three years and I am just now finding out that he doesn't love me, but he loves one of my cousins. I just can't get him out of my head. I don't know why. I do all sorts of things to get him out of my head. Maybe you can tell me a way.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO.

It's hard to forget anyone you have loved for three years, my dear. But try to find some other interests and when you think of him at all, think of him as belonging to your cousin.

COUNTY WOULD BORROW $43,680,000

A majestic town hall, commodious enough for the largest conventions, to cost $6,000,000; four fine boulevards, reaching every quarter, on which $10,930,000 will be spent; two great new bridges over the Ohio and one over the Youghiogheny, calling for total expenditure of $10,650,000, and a $1,500,000 airport comprise the most important of the projects for which the commissioners of Allegheny county are to ask the citizens for authority to borrow $43,680,000. An imaginative picture of these momentous improvements, drawn by a Sun-Telegraph staff artist to help the readers to appreciate the magnitude of the plan, is presented above. The commissioners also propose to construct new highways and improve old ones in different parts of the county.

Kent Tells Emily He Is Going Away To Study Law

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and her flaming sister, Kitten, are daughters of a worker at the Rossiter factory. Emily, in high school, makes an ideal of Kent Rossiter and is greatly worried at her inability to mingle with the socially elect. Marty Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is attentive to Emily. He risks his life to gather some leaves for her and presents her with an Airedale. Emily forms a friendship with rich Mrs. Halden, an interior decorator, who talks color and beauty to her and impresses upon her that the only aristocracy is that of work. Emily feels that her destiny is in her own hands. Day helps foment a strike. Emily persuadets Mr. Rossiter to take him back as they are starving, but Day takes his good luck in the wrong spirit. Kent introduces her to his sister, who snubs her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HAND on her arm, he led her through the crowded room. Avis was standing by a window with Marty Nolan; she was tall as Kent, but dark, with stormy eyes and rather sullen, full lips. Very beautiful, Emily thought her, and very much the lady of the world as she turned languidly, shrugging a bare shoulder.

"Avis—" Kent grinned delightedly. "Little pal of mine—Emily Day. Ever see anything prettier?"

Avis shrugged again, said "How do you do?" in a bored tone without a change of expression and turned back to Marty. It reminded Emily, oddly, of Raggedy upstaging the yapping cur, such a complete snub it was. She flushed and turned; then she saw that Kent had noticed nothing wrong. It took her years to learn that men seldom sense the feline gesture.

"Perhaps it's the society way," she thought. "Make others feel uncomfortable, let them see you're not interested. Yet that isn't kind; it doesn't seem to me it's the thoroughbred thing."

She thought of this as the party went on and she saw that Avis' manner had not been reserved for her alone. She met everyone with a languid weariness excepting Marilee Grainger, who came late and was even more haughty than Avis herself.

And, of course, Marty Nolan.

Emily kept wondering about that. Marty, a striking fellow with the light on his ruddy head, turning his scornful glance everywhere. But not one you'd expect Avis to single out. She sat beside him now, all flashing smile, looking at him something as Anne Morrow did when that girl would rush up and begin, "Oh, Mr. Nolan—"

Could it be that Avis, too, thought him a "type"—whatever that was—"red-blooded and two-fisted?"

But Marty wasn't trying to get away from Avis. He scowled but his eyes never left the beautiful face. Once when they seemed to be arguing something his fingers closed tightly around her arm; so tightly that red marks sprang out afterward.

A tremendous experience this was for Emily, coming here to Highcliffe, seeing just how magnificent a home might be.

The portraits on the walls, some of the subjects in powdered wigs and ruffs; the soft, exquisitely blended colors of the rooms; the servants moving like shadows in the background; even the thin, gleaming crystal in which ices were served. Oh, a supreme experience for a girl from The Hill!

Yet her mind kept going back to Avis and Marty sitting together throughout the evening. Not a surprising thing that Marilee Grainger kept close to Kent, treated him with a half petulent air of proprietorship. The Graingers lived up the river; their grounds adjoined Highcliffe and it was generally understood Kent and Marilee would be married when they were older.

But Marty . . . First Anne and now Avis Rossiter.

She stood by a French window opening on a terrace. Outside the lawns were powdered by moonlight; roses were wraith flowers nodding in the stillness.

With a quick little glance around she opened the window and went wandering out under the stars.

CHAPTER VIII.

ON the brink of the cliff there was a circular pergola, very white and ghostly in the dim light, above a stone bench. Rose vines swayed overhead, spilling a soft fragrance; far below the river ran liquid silver, throwing up eerie spurts of brightness where little waves caught the moonbeams.

Emily stole in here, sat down with an awed happiness, relaxed to the charm of splendid night. No problem to ponder out here; only beauty. A rushing tide of beauty rising about her, overwhelming with gentle peace.

Why should she care what others did—what years might bring? Always this to turn to. Kent was going away; going out of her life. He would come back and marry Marilee Grainger and she would see him no more. Well, no use feeling sorry. Life was like that—ships that pass . . .

He was beside her suddenly. Putting his arm along the back of the seat, smiling.

TRIAL END NEAR AT ALBANY

ALBANY, N. Y., May 26.—(INS.)—Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, former secretary of state and first woman ever elected to state-wide office in New York, on trial a second time for alleged theft of census money, may know her fate by tonight.

The case will be given to the jury today as soon as both sides have summed up, and Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan has delivered his charge.

In the event the jury does not reach a verdict tonight, Justice Callaghan will hold court in session tomorrow.

Mrs. Knapp, specifically, is charged with stealing a $2,875 census check issued in the name of her stepdaughter, Clara Blanche Knapp, an instructor at Middlebury College, Vermont.

After deliberating eight hours, the jury at the first trial disagreed, six to six.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

By HAVEY J. BOYLE

WE SHOULD like to start a questionnaire on the grave problem of whether it is right or wrong to ask a man, whose name in an introduction you don't catch, to ask for the name. We have looked hurriedly through Miss Post's book on etiquette, but the matter is not brought up for solution. Personally, we are against the practice, but we don't know whether our attitude is a sound one.

* * *

There is something about it we don't like. It seems here that it puts the man asking for the name the second time in a superior position. In fact, we believe it is a sign of a superiority complex. We were introduced to a man the other day and not catching our name he looked at us, somehow with an accusing eye, and, we thought, a superior tone, saying: "I didn't catch the name." We felt like saying: "It's not important, anyway—let's play catch," but instead we repeated our name.

DIDN'T GET THE NAME!

NOW the man who asked us our name might have been well within his rights, but it seems here that he should know that other men don't like to go around telling their right name.

Our own system of accepting an introduction may not be 100 per cent perfect, but it at least does not make the second fellow to the business feel as if he were having his curls patted and the bow on his little sailor suit straightened out.

When we don't catch the name we always say: "Glad to meet you, Mr. Mumblejumble," in a tone so low that it may sound like the right name. Then, later, if we are still curious, we'll ask the man who made the introduction what the name was that we missed.

Usually, the men who ask: "What's the name?" accompany the question with a strong grip of the hand. Possibly, the idea is they are not going to let you go until you give up your secret. We don't believe in laying a flabby fish in a man's hand when he wants to shake with you, but there is another extreme that is just as bad.

GLAD TO MEET YOU—WHAT'S THE NAME AGAIN?
HEY!

But the tight grip is not so bad as the question, "What's the name?"

* * *

HAND-SHAKING, of course, long ago lost its purpose. Originally, it was designed to show the man you were meeting you didn't have a spear or a sawed-off shotgun up your sleeve. What it really meant at first was: "Don't be afraid, citizen, I'm not loaded." The custom continued long after the habit of shooting down an acquaintance was prevalent only in countries like Chicago.

* * *

It is a habit that grows, too. We have a friend who shakes hands on the slightest provocation. At noon he shakes your hand in a fashion that prompts the idea: "Well, I'm off for Europe," and then the same evening he shakes again, as if he had just returned from there.

An efficiency expert might with profit address himself to the task of discovering how much time is wasted in this manner.

WE HAVE noticed that when we need a shave and our heels need repair more men ask: "What's the name?" than when we wear our Sunday suit and the new necktie that Aunt Emma sent from California. This observation, then, leads to the conclusion that the man who says "What's the name?" is patronizing, if not taking on an air of condescension.

* * *

As happened once in 1914—or was it 1916?—we may be mistaken about this, but it is a question that may interest a few. Perhaps some new idea may be forthcoming out of this discussion.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

LOVE!!!

by FRANK L. PACKARD

The Monatah Is in Great Danger of Grounding On the Reefs

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley, once a dashing sea-faring adventurer, is picked up in a fragile craft by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Mute evidence on the body testifies to the fact that the man died in a struggle. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives the various articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after thirty years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. Hidden in the hold of the ship he overhears five Chinamen plotting.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

WHAT was he to do? He was conscious of a sense of moral responsibility that would be neither ignored nor denied. There was something ironical about it, too—as though Fate had taken a hand in the game and was having a bit of a laugh at him, challenging him to a tilt.

He couldn't watch all of those five Chinamen, for they would certainly have scattered by now; but neither could he stand by inactive and permit some man, "a man with a torn garment," to be murdered in cold blood. He did not know who the proposed victim was, nor did he know which one of the five Chinamen was the actual assassin-elect—but that did not relieve him of his responsibility in any degree, and unless he acted, and acted quickly, some man's life would pay for his failure to live up to that responsibility.

He was on the main deck now, where, opening on the deck itself, were the limited number of first-class cabins, his own amongst them, that the Monotah possessed. And suddenly he stood still. He glanced swiftly out over the rail. There was a heavy sea running and it was blowing half a gale, but for the moment the Monotah was on a fairly even keel. And yet, as though her nose were pointing downward into the trough of some huge wave and as though she had thrown her stern high in the air and had lifted her propeller from the water, the engines were racing like mad, insensate things. Every rivet and every plate in the ship seemed to shake and vibrate as though they were striving to wrench themselves apart. He heard the clang of the engine room bell. He heard the patter of feet along the boat deck overhead. And then, abruptly, the engines stopped, and, as abruptly, the vibrations ceased.

Engine trouble of some kind probably! Not a particularly good night for that sort of thing—but there were worse things than engine trouble. Those blasted Chinamen, for instance, with their infernal knife-sticking proclivities!

Well, after all, there was only one thing to do—go up to Capt. Karler's cabin, which was beneath the bridge on the boat deck above, lay his own cards on the table, and put the whole matter up to the Monotah's commander. Capt. Karler was an irascible little old chap, of course, and not the sort that inspired confidence, but there was no reason why his, Bob Kingsley's, participation in the affair should be known to any one outside the skipper himself. All that was necessary was that the five Chinamen, on whatever pretext best suited Capt. Karler, should be herded together and kept under surveillance. Logically, Capt. Karler could not help but be in accord with his, Bob Kingsley's, efforts to draw the net around the whole piratical gang, of which these five men here were probably but a small part, but who, if nothing went awry, could be made to serve as decoys for the rest. There was no reason why any of the five should have the slightest suspicion that he had any hand whatever in the restrictions Capt. Karler put upon their liberty, or any suspicion that such restrictions were even remotely connected with the visit of Hsi Yan's junk to Kalawa. It was the one way out—the only thing to do. He had to depend on Capt. Karler being a reasonable man; but, in any case, he had no choice. He could not stand idly by and see a man murdered—butchered, probably, would be the better word!

The engines were still silent; and the Monotah, evidently due to the fact that she had lost steerage-way and had fallen off broadside to the sea, was rolling more heavily than ever as Bob Kingsley mounted the forward port ladder to the boat deck. Here, for an instant he paused and looked around him. whatever the trouble was, there seemed to be no undue commotion in evidence save that two native Malay sailors in uncharacteristic haste brushed by him on the run and scurried down the ladder he had just ascended, and that a voice which he recognized as that of the skipper himself was bellowing an order from the bridge.

Bob Kingsley, without standing on any ceremony, made for the bridge ladder, and in a trice was standing on the bridge itself. Something might be wrong with the engines, something undoubtedly was wrong; but there was something else wrong, too, down there below decks, something that was imperative in its demand for immediate action. In cold English a man's life was at stake.

At the starboard end of the bridge he could make out two figures leaning over the weather-cloth. He stepped toward them—one was the squat, stodgy figure of Capt. Karler, and, as he drew nearer, he saw that the man was in pajamas; the other, bawling suddenly at the moment through cupped hands to some one on the fo'c'sle head, he recognized as Parsons.

CHAPTER XV.

BOB KINGSLEY touched Captain Karler on the arm; and, as the other whirled sharply around, he could see that the skipper's face was hard, the lines about the man's lips tightly drawn. And, meeting the other's stony glare, he attributed this decidedly ungracious reception to his own unlicensed invasion of the bridge—on which subject he suddenly remembered Captain Karler was more of a martinet than the commander of a crack liner.

"Look here," he said hurriedly, "I know it's a bit out of order, my barging up here, but what I have to say to you won't wait. As a matter of fact, I was going to your room to knock you up about it. There isn't time to tell you how I found it out—I'll explain all that in detail after you've got those five Chinamen down there cooped up together with some one keeping an eye on them. I don't want to assume the scepter, but there isn't a minute to lose. They've got it in for some chap—I don't know who—murder, you understand? I saw them drawing lots to see who would do the job. And as I don't know who drew the long stick or the short stick, or whatever it was that elected him, the only thing to do is to grab the lot of them, and grab them quick, or else it will cost some poor devil his life."

For a moment Captain Karler was silent, his face still set like a stone; and then he gave a short, unnatural mirthless laugh.

"If it's only one life tonight we'll be in luck!" he said grimly. "I've a bigger job on my hands than your five Chinamen and whomever they're after—and I've neither the men nor the time to give them a second thought. It's a question now, and touch-and-go, for every last soul aboard here." He caught Bob Kingsley's arm, and led the way quickly to the starboard end of the bridge. "Do you see that?" he demanded tersely—and flung a pointing hand to leeward.

Bob Kingsley startd. The darkness was markedly accentuated at the horizon line. A sailor himself, his trained eye estimated the distance at between two and three miles. Land, of course! Nearer the ship, perhaps three-quarters of the way in, there was a thin continuous white line, distinct from the intermittent breaking crests of the waves that lay between. Like spume, it was.

He swung swiftly around on the Monotah's commander.

"That's the Baalu Reef!" he exclaimed.

"Oh! ejaculated Capt. Karler, with a curious stare. "So you know that, do you?"

"I know we're not far off Aoru, so I ought to know it's the Baalu," Bob Kingsley answered. "I've sailed this coast since I was a kid."

"Then you know that the reef extends for miles," said the skipper; "and, knowing the Baalu for what it is, you'll understand that if we're piled on it in this sea we're as good as gone."

Bob Kingsley leaned closer toward the other, staring questioningly into the captain's face.

"But I don't understand," he said. "I don't understand why we should pile on it. You're on your course, aren't you?—and we've a good mile and a half at least of deep water between us."

"Aye," said Capt. Karler, with a bitter smile, "too deep for any anchor to find bottom." A sudden ominous quiet came into his voice. "You heard the engines race a few minutes ago, didn't you? Well, the propeller's gone—with the Baalu Reef close aboard to leeward in a gale. That's all."

Bob Kingsley's hand tightened on the bridge rail.

"Good God!" he said under his breath.

The skipper spoke again—in the same ominously quiet tones:

"Our only chance is to claw to windward with sail—and we're no sailboat. What bits of rag we can show, we're bending now—and I've no men for your Chinamen, Mr. Moore. Very last one of the crew is working for the lives of all of us. The chap you're talking about will have to take his chance. I only hope to God it won't be every man and woman aboard here for himself or herself before it's over!"

Capt. Karler turned abruptly away—and as abruptly came back again.

"Keep what I've said to yourself," he cautioned. "There is nothing to be gained by alarming the passengers as yet; especially the native passengers—they might get out of hand. You understand?"

Bob Kingsley nodded.

"I understand," he said soberly.

Capt. Karler turned away again, and this time rejoined the mate at the other end of the bridge; but for a moment Bob Kingsley did not move. His eyes were on that thin, almost wraith-like line of white to leeward and on the tumbling water that lay between. It seemed as though suddenly the whole scene had shifted. A few minutes ago the gale that was blowing and the heavy sea that was running had not given him the slightest concern; now there seemed to be an anger in the sea and in the night that boded ill—and it seemed that the waves had increased in height and turbulence, and that the wind was fiercer in its role of task-master as it lashed the sea with frenzied gusts like blows from a slave-driver's whip, as it were, that mercilessly flogged and flogged its demand for the maximum of effort and activity. The Monotah under control was one thing; the Monotah practically helpless was quite another. Undoubtedly the ship was making leeway fast. It was the flip of a coin. He was as well aware of that now as Capt. Karler was.

With a sort of fatalistic shrug of his shoulders, he turned away from the rail, and went down the bridge ladder to the boat deck. It would be a mess, of course, a rather nasty one, if anything happened—the natives were likely to be deucedly unpleasant—would probably run amuck, as a matter of fact. Well, there was nothing to be done so far as that was concerned but wait and see. Capt. Karler evidently knew his job, and was a cool-headed beggar to boot. If any man could pull the Monotah through, Capt. Karler could—that was all there was to that end of it.

Meanwhile there were the five Chinamen.

Horoscopes

Sunday, May 27

SUNDAY'S Horoscope shows active and thriving conditions for church, charity and for superiors in many lines. The tendency to despondency and the inclination to seek diversion in strange and illicit ways should be suppressed.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of business and financial progress despite some obstacles and delays. They should shun illicit acts, companions and extravagances.

A child born on this day will be versatile and ambitious, but disappointment may incline it toward baleful consolations unless such proclivities be observed and properly directed early in life.

Every conquered temptation represents a new fund of moral energy.—Buckham.

Monday, May 28

Monday's astrological chart shows particularly active conditions, almost of a spectacular and whirlwind nature, but these may be turned into avenues of disaster if the element of tempest and turmoil be permitted to dominate affairs. With cool and temperate conduct many benefits and great personal satisfactions may be attained.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of excellent, though possibly unexpected, benefits and opportunities if they will keep firm control and not be swept away by impulse and turbulence. These may reap loss and fraud as well as disaster.

Every trial endured and weathered in the right spirit makes a soul nobler and stronger than it was before.—Buckham.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A DOMESTIC WOMAN By L. P. ARMSTRONG

"ONE always has misgivings about a mother-in-law," said Dolly Winston, "because nine times out of ten she proves a source of discord and dissension."

"I don't see why," objected Tom with some heat. "Your mother—"

"Always spoiled you terribly, Tom. And then, too, Mother knows how to have her own way by subtle means. She can actually change my mind without my knowing it, and that's because she never emphasizes means over ends. Few women can forego the triumph of proving themselves right, even at the sacrifice of victory."

"What have you been reading?" asked her husband suspiciously.

"I've been thinking, Honey," his small wife retorted, kissing him and twitching his nose. "Sam Nettleton's mother is coming to visit the bride and groom, and Gladys is despondent over the prospect."

Tom sniffed. "Women look for trouble. They take a magnifying glass and make a careful search. It's quite a blow when they don't fint it."

Having delivered this broadside, Tom disappeared behind the afternoon paper to hide the malicious grin on his dark, handsome face. He waited for his wife to take up cudgels for her sex, and after a moment was astonished at her silence.

"Don't be serious about this mother-in-law question," he advised. "Old Mrs. Nettleton's only going to spend a few days with Sam and Gladys. She can't be much of a bother. I'm surprised at the attitude of you two girls."

"You don't understand," Dolly Winston said. "Of course Gladys is going to welcome her, try to make her stay here pleasant. But it's unfortunate she is coming just at this time. You know, Sam has just agreed to Gladys' wish to continue her job at the office, although at first he clung to his old-fashioned ideas about women being domestic. It's easy to see he had those ideas drilled into him by his mother, who's a very domestic type, and now she's coming for an indefinite stay—just as everything's running smoothly!"

"Gladys feels, after all," Tom observed with a twinkle in his eye, "that she might have a difficult time justifying herself in her mixed career."

"Nothing of the sort," said Dolly, aroused at last. "But Sam's mother will probably find fault, criticise the way they manage and—"

"I'd wait until she did," advised Tom drily.

Old Mrs. Nettleton arrived on Saturday afternoon and was duly welcomed by her son and his new wife. They anxiously sought to entertain her, taking her on long drives about the country, introducing her to a host of their friends. Dolly and Tom dropped into the Nettleton apartment rather late Sunday afternoon.

"Sam's partner," cried old Mrs. Nettleton as she clasped Tom Winston's hand. "I've wondered what you were like. Sam talks about you—but I could see he was too fond of you and Dolly to give me a true picture."

"A rather handsome fellow," put in Dolly, unable to restrain her impish humor, and a little jealous, too, because Tom had gotten the center of the stage. "But that modest expression is deceiving, Mrs. Nettleton. He's very opinionated, and he can solve domestic problems and read the paper simultaneously."

Tom pinched her cheek. "Hold your tongue, woman! Do you want to be publicly chastized?"

"See!" exclaimed Dolly daringly, "he's old-fashioned enough to threaten to beat me!"

Sam grinned, but his wife flushed and looked uncomfortable, and Dolly herself was abashed at her own words. But Sam's mother laughed.

"There are not many old-fashioned couples these days," she said pleasantly.

Both Dolly and Gladys looked at her with suspicion. There had been nothing insinuating in her tone—but did she mean to infer anything?

She was a tall woman, with angular features and straight, iron-gray hair worn parted in the middle and brushed severely back from her high forehead. There was a quiet air of efficiency about her, she looked disturbingly capable. Sam had often said his mother had worked hard most of her life. She had taken in sewing to help him through college, sold eggs and vegetables to send him spending money. In a thousand ways she had sacrificed herself. And just when Sam was in a position to help her, make a home for her, she had married a neighbor whose farm adjoined hers. Sam said he would always feel cheated at not having been able to do something for his mother; it gave him a sense of inferiority that was vexing.

And he had always stood in awe of her, acted unhesitatingly upon her commands when a boy, followed her advice unquestioningly when a man. Dolly Winston realized this; Gladys did too—and that was why she was alarmed. Every woman wants to come first in her own home. And there was the question of her going on with her work in the law offices of Winston & Nettleton—what if Mrs. Nettleton openly disapproved her doing so?

"I'll ask her to spend the day with me tomorrow," said Dolly in an undertone as they left.

Gladys gave Dolly a grateful look. To have her mother-in-law away from the apartment while she was at work! She could not bear thinking of her snooping around, finding that Milly was wasting butter, not dusting properly, etc.

So the next day Dolly drove to town and got old Mrs. Nettleton, carried her to their cottage in the suburbs.

Ordinarily she would have delighted to bringing out her Sevres china, concocting appetizing dishes for luncheon. Now she felt like a traitor to Gladys. She could see that Sam's mother was comparing her well ordered home with the Nettleton apartment which, though well kept enough, was more or less the conventional type of apartment, in which a married couple can scarcely be said to live, but where they pass the time after working hours.

Well, it suited Sam and Gladys—and Gladys hadn't been brought up by a mother whose housekeeping was faultless. Environment means a lot.

"I think it's fine that Gladys can keep on working at the law office,' Dolly began boldly as she poured tea. "Tom thinks she has a real legal mind. If she were a man she'd be famous, and as it is she's invaluable to Sam. After all," Dolly added thoughtfully, "isn't that what's expected of women—to be satellies—adding to the glory of their husbands?"

"I hadn't thought of that," said old Mrs. Nettleton. "But what a lovely home you have, dear. I see you're a good housekeeper."

"Housekeeping's nothing," scoffed Dolly, hiding her dismay. "Gladys is doing real constructive work. I'm different, that's all. I'm just domestic. Older people have a prejudice sometimes about a woman's doing anything outside the home. I hope you haven't, Mrs. Nettleton.'

"I?" exclaimed Sam Nettleton's mother. "What an idea, child! Let me tell you something about myself. When I was 16 I—I began a career. I studied medicine for a year and a half. I suppose that'll shock you, but I've always wanted to be a doctor. There are many women doctors in the west, and I even had enthusiasm enough to dare be a pioneer—when I was a girl."

"What stopped you?" asked Dolly, looking dazed with surprise.

"The crops failed during my second year at college and we were hard up. Then my mother was ill. I came home and after she died, there was no one but me to keep house for my father. Well, as the years passed I drifted into marriage. Fate didn't intend for me to be anything but domestic. And because of my experience I've been afraid Gladys would decide to give up her work—which she loves. I can see she's a clever girl and it means much to her."

"Tell her that!" cried Dolly excitedly. "Gladys doesn't understand—she thing that you—"

But Mrs. Nettleton smiled. "What I've said to you has been said in confidence, she stated. "I've lived long enough to know better than to meddle in other peoples' lives. And as to what Gladys thinks of me," she added with a wistful sweetness, "I'd rather she found out for herself she's mistaken. I want her to make an effort herself to know her motherlinilaw. Then we'll really be good friends."

A Surprise Invitation to Madge to Ride With Young Mr. Jackson

LILLIAN had spoken truly when she had said that young Mr. Jackson in his calls on Mary was "staging as continuous a performance as Noel Veritzen used to do." Ever since my welcoming dinner to Lillian and Marion at which Philip and Noel Veritzen, Miss Lincoln and Mr. Jackson had been guests, the handsome stranger whom I still dubbed in my thoughts "the mysterious youth with the wolf hound," had been almost a daily caller at the farmhouse.

With charming courtesy which had a distinctly foreign flavor, he managed to convey the impression that his desire to see all the members of the family was equally great. And the gifts of bonbons, magazines and fruit which he invariably brought with him were impartially distributed. yet there was a subtle something in his manner toward Mary which set her apart, and I gave him credit for the cleverness with which he managed gradually to gain the whole time and attention of the young girl for himself while failing in no detail of chivalrous courtesy to the rest of us.

His conquest of Mother Graham was his greatest triumph. Evidently she had quite forgotten that she had characterized him as "one of a gang of crooks," for she beamed upon him now whenever he appeared, and she was always ready to go with him and Mary on the drives to which he scrupulously invited some older member of our group.

His strict inclusion of a chaperone upon every occasion when he took Mary driving puzzled me, for he had brought Miss Lincoln to our dinner with no other attendant but himself. Lillian explained it with her usual levity.

"He's either doing it to protect himself, so he won't lose his head and propose, or else he's lulling you to sleep so that after awhile when he begins to drop the chaperones gradually and adroitly, you won't notice"

But it was not to call on Mary that young Jackson was sending his motor car up the drive at the moment that Lillian had commented upon his arrival He brought the car to an abrupt stop, was out of the car at the same instant, and ran up the veranda steps as if some one were pursuing him.

"Mrs. Graham," he said almost breathlessly, "will you come for a little drive with me? Something has arisen about which I must ask your advice."

I concealed my astonishment with a smiling acquiescence, and with an apologetic word to Lillian, he hurried me away. As the car swept away from the house I caught a glimpse from an upper window of Mary's lovely face wearing the most ludicrous look of astonishment The next instant she had gone from the window and I knew she had taken no chance of young Mr. Jackson seeing her and noting her surprised disappointment, for that emotion was also mirrored in her face.

"This is unpardonable of me, I know," the young man said as he sent the car down the road at a speed which showed his excitement, "but I really don't know to whom else I can appeal."

"If you keep up this pace," I said laughing, "you'll have a chance to appeal to a judge in a traffic court if we don't land in a hospital or a morgue."

"I do beg your pardon," he said, instantly lessening the speed of the car "But I really am so upset I don't know what to do. Tell me, is it true that Mr. Veritzen is going to put Miss Lincoln upon the stage after she has studied with him, and that she is to begin a preliminary course in the history of the drama with you?"

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

Rainy Spring Puts Minors in Plight That Makes Scouts Forego Usual Spring Ivory Hunts—Viox's Bat Still Busy in Minors—Even Star Southpaws Fail to Stop Ruth's Rush.

BILL HINCHMAN

WHEN you consider that the unusual number of 54 games have been postponed in the major leagues in a little more than six weeks—31 in the National and 23 in the American—and that cold or threatening weather has kept the attendance down to lean figures on numerous other occasions, just picture in your mind the plight in which the minor leagues of the country are placed at present.

Operating a minor league club is a big gamble at the best of times. It's hard to make the books balance, except in a few prosperous cities where the home club is drawing well, and about the only chance of escaping a loss is to find and develop a prospect that can be sold to a major league club for a fancy price.

IT is at a time like this that it becomes doubly hard for big league scouts, such as Bill Hinchman, Chic Fraser, Joe Devine and others of the Pittsburgh club, to carry on their customary duties and get satisfying results.

The unfavorable weather has hit the minors even harder than the majors. Small gates are the order, money is running so low that it is hard matter to meet salaries, rain is knocking out games by the score and particularly on the plum dates of Saturdays and Sundays, and the players have not yet been ready to attain the right form to show what they can do.

JESS PETTY

SO what can a poor scout do under the circumstances? It is time for Hinchman and Fraser to make their early trips to leagues of a certain class in quest of material of a particular kind, but with the weather continuing to prevent games until the magnates are in a state bordering on panic, and with the players unable to show their best stuff, the Buc ivory hunters, like those in the employ of other clubs, must simply wait until conditions clear. Finding young players with enough ability to make them reasonably good prospects for purchase by big league clubs has been becoming harder and harder from year to year, but the present season threatens to be the toughest of the lot.

DID the Brooklyn club collect or remit the fine of $200 that was plastered upon Pitcher Jess Petty before he was restored to good standing Thursday and went to the hill to shut out the Giants?

Brooklyn reports merely state that Petty was reinstated after a meeting of the players.

ROBBIE went into no private conference with Petty, but informed him along with the other players that the club's training rules were meant to be obeyed and that failure to do so would be punished by a penalty such as Petty suffered. No mention of the $200 fine slapped upon the pitcher was made and one Brooklyn writer says the impression remains that the fine will stick. Yet Petty asserted he never would pitch another ball for Brooklyn unless the club remitted the fine. Which side weakened?

REMEMBER Jimmy Viox, who used to play second base for the Pirates? And how he could hit! Well, he's still able to swing the old ash.

JIMMY VIOX

Viox is manager of the Raleigh club of the Piedmont League this year and his batting has been one of the outstanding features of the league to date, even though Jimmy is approaching his 38th birthday anniversary.

VIOX was obtained by the Pirates from the Lexington club of the Blue Grass League and made his first appearance here in 1912 under Fred Clarke. When Jimmy Callahan succeeded Clarke in 1916, he included Viox with George Gibson, Babe Adams and others whom he proceeded to discard. Viox was first loaned to Toronto and then sold to Los Angeles, but refused to report and finally was sold to Kansas City after the season of 1916.

THE Babe continues to batter the old bulb. Already ahead of his schedule, he pulled even farther in advance of it yesterday when he cracked out his fifteenth and sixteenth home runs of the year against Rube Walberg and Eddie Rommel of the Phillies.

Last year Ruth also made his fifteenth and sixteenth in one day against the Athletics, Howard Ehmke pitching for the A's in one game, and Jack Quinn in the other. The Bambino is now six days and five homers ahead of his schedule, and his lead is even greater when it is considered that his club has not played as many games as it had played at this date last season. Ruth has until June 5 to keep up with his schedule by making his seventeenth four-baser.

RUTH also demonstrated again yesterday that left-hand pitchers mean no more than right-handers in his young life, as one of his wallops was made at the expense of Rube Walberg, star southpaw of the Athletics. It is no new experience for Walberg to see one of his offerings slammed for a round trip by the Bambino. Ruth pasted him for four homers last year, one in 1925 and one in 1923.

THE famous bunion derby from Los Angeles to New York reaches its end today, the remaining runners, representing only a small percentage of the original starters, being scheduled to wind up the affair with a 10-mile race in Madison Square Garden following the run from Passaic, N. J., to New York.

With victory, as far as the transcontinental derby itself, is concerned, assured to Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla., the average sport follower finds the real final feature of the race contained in the almost incredible report that Cash and Carry Pyle, the promoter, has lost money to the extent of $60,000.

SPORT FANDOM has a pretty good imagination, particularly when the home ball club is losing and something is needed to explain the slump, but it is beyond them to picture Mr. Pyle losing money on anything. They are waiting eagerly for the final act in the bunion drama before they will be convinced that "C. C." hasn't a card up his sleeve that will save him from a loss.

U. S. Soccer Team Swamps Dutch at Baseball

AMSTERDAM, Holland, May 26.—(AP.)—The Dutch may be able to hold America even in soccer, but in baseball—that's another story.

The United States Olympic soccer team played a 1-1 tie with the Ajax club, one of Holland's strongest organizations, in an exhibition game here Thursday.

Yesterday the two friendly rivals took to baseball and the Americans had the merriest time of their Dutch stay.

After 25 runs had been scored, officials stopped counting the American tallies and recorded only the Dutch runs, which totalled 4.

The Americans slugged the ball all over the field, into the grandstands and over the roof, much to the amazement of the Dutch, who stood with mouths wide open at these apparently incredible feats.

BUENOS AIRES, May 26.—(AP.)—Monte Munn, former Nebraska legislator, last night knocked out Victorio Campolo, Argentine heavyweight champion in the ninth round of a 12-round bout here.

LONG BUNION DERBY TO FINISH TONIGHT

PASSAIC, N. J., May 26.—(AP.)—Jaunty in spick-and-span uniforms, heads perked up and smiles on leather-brown faces, Charley Pyle's puppy-pounders moved from Passaic today, bound for New York, the goal of their transcontinental jaunt.

The little Jersey town went wild with excitement yesterday. Crowds lined the course of the 24.7-mile run from Suffern, N. Y., and traffic was a hurley-burly mess as the long arm of coincidence reached out again and led Johnny Salo, Passaic ship worker, to the finish line first in the High School Stadium of his home town. Entirely by accident, the promoters naively explains, "local boys" have been doing that all the way along the route from Los Angeles."

As far as competition goes, the race to New York over 3,400 miles of mountains, deserts, and finally asphalt pavement, already is over. Salo cut one hour 13 minutes and 41 seconds from the huge lead of Andy Payne, Oklahoma farm boy, holds over him for first place in the mammoth trek, but only an accident of serious nature can keep Payne from reaching the ultimate goal in Madison Square Garden tonight with the $25,000 top prize already in his hands.

Only an accident—or the financial

PERKINS LEADS WETHERED

PRESTWICK, May 26.—(AP.)—T. P. Perkins, English amateur golf champion, was 2 up on Roger Wethered, former British amateur champion, at the end of the first round of their 36-hole final in the British amateur golf championship today.

Wethered was lucky that he was only 2 down at lunch time, for his woods gave him all sorts of trouble. He started by losing the first hole and couldn't win one himself until the thirteenth, which he took with a fine cleek to the green from 220 yards.

Perkins was 4 up at the fourteenth, but then lost the fifteenth and sixteenth and halved the seventeenth and eighteenth. He played steadily and outplayed Wethered at all but the three holes which he lost.

STRIKEOUT KING

Malone is a strikeout king. Last year, pitching more than 300 innings for the Minneapolis club of the American Association, he mowed down 214 batters with his speed ball. The Cubs consider him a very valuable acquisition, although he had a little trouble striking his stride at the start of the present campaign.

LOCALS, ST. LOUIS READY

By TOM BIRKS.

WITH the two greatest amateur soccer machines in the country primed for action and ready for the referee's whistle, Western Pennsylvania soccerites will wend their way to the Bridgeville Speedway this afternoon when in the interests of the miner's benefit fund to see Heidelberg, Western Pennsylvania soccer champions, clash with the St. Louis Muny League team, the great eleven that won the Western States Olympic elimination title.

For many years, in fact ever since Arden lost that memorable fight at Sportsman Park, St. Louis, local fans have yearned to see a St. Louis team in action. This interest was only natural, for all of our greatest teams traveling to the Mound City have always been beaten.

"Bring them to Pittsburgh" was the cry. "We will beat them easily." Heidelberg picked that up after the team here today nosed them out two months ago and a chance to represent America at the Olympic games went a glimmering. It is no small wonder that Heidelberg has sought this game.

Well, anyway, that test will be made today. Coach Finnegan landed in Pittsburgh late last evening with 13 players, so it is possible substitutes will be used in the game. The Miners' committee report a heavy sale of tickets and fandom should rally to the support of the game. A nominal fee of 50 cents is being charged. This is surprising, with a heavy expense of the visiting club. The game is scheduled to start at 4:30 daylight saving time.

This will probably be the only time a St. Louis club will be in Pittsburgh this year, and it is the one big chance for local fans to make the comparison of the style employed by the clubs.

The probable lineup:

Heidelberg.		St. Louis.
Courtley	G.	Walsh
Villani	R. B.	Ducker
Fagan	L. B.	Kelly
Grandy	R. H.	Chartrand
Jones	C. H.	Hartigan
Stenzel	L. H.	Claeys
Chapple	O. R.	Kortum
A. Donelli	I. R.	Schmidt
O'Donnell	C.	Wiesler
McCloskey	I. L.	Berger
Grilli	O. L.	McGann

Reserves—Heidelberg: Matthews, Kulsis, Savage, P. Donelli. St. Louis: Neagle and Delaney.

U. S. Stars Get Easy Victory

KANSAS CITY, May 26.—(AP.)—Winning in straight sets, the United States defeated China's Davis Cup tennis aces in the first two singles matches of the American zone semi-finals here yesterday.

John Hennessey of Indianapolis defeated Gordon Lum of Shanghai, 6-3, 6-1, 6-0, while George Lott of Chicago whitewashed Paul King, also from Shanghai, in straight love sets, 6-0, 6-0, 6-0.

The ease with which the American victories came brought predictions that the matches would be clinched in today's doubles when William T. Tilden, American captain, and Wilbur F. Coen, Jr., of Kansas City, meet the two Chinese stars.

Erratic playing by both the Chinese failed to place them in a class with Lott and Hennessey, who enjoyed an easy afternoon of play. Lum virtually defeated himself with errors and Hennessey never was forced to open up.

Lott, although easily the star of the afternoon's uninteresting play, also carried on under wraps with even less trouble.

THE appearance of the Pirates as they near the important Decoration Day milestone is anything but comforting to the fans who had hoped to see the team on or near the top when the race approached this part of the National League highway.

The big holiday will be with us Wednesday, but it isn't likely that the arrival and passing of that date will find the club out beyond the .500 mark, all of which will be disappointing, but it is still too early to become discouraged.

If the Buccos are no better off when the Fourth of July rolls around, it will be time to be alarmed. Meantime, remember the Braves of 1914, who were at the foot of the league when the boys were shooting the firecrackers

Wightman Team Is Named

NEW YORK, May 26.—(AP.)—Three women veterans of the tennis courts and two less experienced players have been named to defend the Wightman Cup against the challenge of England this year.

The five who will represent America in the team matches at Wimbledon are Miss Helen Wills and Miss Helen Jacobs, of Los Angeles; Miss Penelope Anderson, of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Molla Mallory and Miss Eleanor Goss, of New York.

James S. Cushman, chairman of the selection committee, said the team would select a captain. Miss Wills, it is believed, will be the unanimous choice for the post.

Miss Wills and Miss Anderson are now in France playing in the French hard court championships. Mrs. Mallory is in Europe, but not playing tennis now. Miss Jacobs is on her way to England. Miss Goss is to sail later.

Miss Jacobs and Miss Anderson are the least experienced players on the team. Miss Jacobs played in the cup matches last year and also in the national championships. Miss Anderson was singles champion of Mexico. Improved form of the two girls this year led to their selection.

The Wightman Cup has been in competition five times, and has been won by America three times.

collapse of the bunionless parade—and the foot-racers, some of them almost unrecognizable with dozens of days of beard freshly scraped from their faces, frankly admitted today they were slightly worried about the solvency of the expedition.

Pyle has asserted that the total prize money, amounting to $48,000, was safely stowed away in a New York bank, although associates admitted that the promoter is some $60,000 behind on the venture. There were reports today that the race had passed from Pyle's direction to that of F. F. Gunn, a Chicago contractor.

Payne, finishing in a tie with William Kerr, of Minneapolis, for fifteenth place, into the eighty-third control, found that Salo had cut his lead for 3,290.1 miles to 16 hours 17 minutes and 34 seconds. Payne's time was 4 hours 3 minutes and 57 seconds for the 24.7 miles, while Salo, cheered constantly by his friends and every citizen in town, trotted the distance in 2:49:26.

Congress Nines Stage Annual Game Today

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(INS.)—With President Coolidge slated to toss out the first ball, the congressional baseball season was to open for its first, last and only game today.

Rival leaders of the Republican and Democrat teams of the House both predicted victory.

"This is a Republican year," said Representative Kelly (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, manager of the majority team.

"If we hold them to 25 runs we'll win; we can easily make 26," responded Representative McMillan (Dem.), of South Carolina, the minority chieftain.

Meantime, cabinet officers and their wives, diplomats and others of officialdom prepared to root as never before. The slogan for the rooters was: "As the ball game goes, so goes the election."

New Marks May Be Set

By JESS CARVER.

HENRY J. BLUM'S trigger finger will be a calloused member by tomorrow. Henry J. is slated to attend to the starting at the annual Pitt Interscholastics at the Stadium this afternoon, in which 52 schools with a total entry of over 800 athletes will compete.

The entry list is going to be the heaviest of the year. There are some 150 athletes entered in the 100 dash alone, which will necessitate the running of about a score of preliminary heats. The fields in the other 12 events are correspondingly large.

Among the more powerful schools entered in the carnival are Parkersburg, High, West Virginia state champs; Academy High, of Erie; Steubenville, O.; Johnstown Central, Beaver Falls, Johnstown Westmont, Rochester, Beaver, New Castle, South Brownsville, Monongahela and Alliance Central of Alliance, O.

Thirteen events are scheduled, including 100, 220, 440 yard dashes; the 880 and mile runs and the 120-yard high hurdles and 220-yard low hurdles in the track events. In the field, the shot, discus, javelin, pole vault, high and broad jumps will be contested. There will be no relay races, two-mile run or hammer throw.

Washington, Steubenville and Parkersburg are the three outstanding favorites to win the point trophy. The Parkersburg Big Red squad, powerful in the field events and with enough good runners to insure the garnering of no few points in the track events, looms as the most dangerous entry.

Individual stars of the ability of Welch, a younger brother of the famous Gibby, of Parkersburg; Miller of Washington; Cesarone and Stribling, of South Brownsville; Knulton, of Rochester; Pusch, of Beaver; Vance, of Greensburg, and Moore, of Beaver Falls, and Craft, of New Castle, will make valiant efforts for new sectional records.

PITT FROSH LOSE

The Pitt freshman trackmen closed the 1928 campaign by losing a dual meet to Kiski yesterday out in the Stadium, 64 to 61.

Pitt maintained a lead until the two closing events, the hammer and javelin. Kiski swept all three places in the latter and first and third in the former.

Lewis of Pitt was high scorer with 19 points.

NET TEAM VICTOR

The Panther net varsity won a shutout match from Westminster, 7 to 0, on the Stadium courts, while the freshman trackers were losing. Westminster was completely outclassed, winning but one set in the entire seven-match engagement. The summary:

SINGLES

Baur, Pitt, defeated Clarke, Westminster, 6-1, 6-3; O'Loughlin, Pitt, defeated Shaffer, Westminster, 6-2, 6-2; Lauler, Pitt, defeated Gibson, Westminster, 6-1, 6-3; Cable, Pitt, defeated Robinson, Westminster, 1-6, 6-0, 6-0; Wunderlich, Pitt, defeated McQuiston, Westminster, 6-0, 6-0.

DOUBLES

Baur and O'Loughlin, Pitt, defeated Clark and Shaffer, Westminster, 6-1, 6-1 Westervelt and Haddon, Pitt, defeated Gibson and McQuiston, Westminster, 6-4, 6-1.

in 1914. The same club won the National League championship and the World Series before they put away their uniforms for the winter.

BUCS STILL FIGHTING.

In all events the Pirates, as halt and lame as they are, will continue to fight. They are scheduled to tangle with the Cubs at Forbes Field this afternoon, the occasion to bring honor to a young man of Altoona, Pa. Many folks of the main-line town will be on hand to pay their respects to Perce Pat Malone, stalwart Cub pitcher, who will grace Fogarty Knoll in the interest of the Cubs and for the edification of the home folks.

Malone was the strikeout king of the American Association last season. He has been doing fine work for the Bears this spring, most of his losses having come after he went into relieve somebody else.

Manager Bush will send Remy Kremer against the Bruins. The French ace has not been up to his normal stride to date, but Remy seems to be getting close to a desirable form.

Capt. Pie Traynor and Sparky Adams will continue among the missing as the contest is played. And neither will be in the Pittsburgh lineup on Sunday when the two clubs transfer the field of competition to Chicago for a single game. Monday, an open date in the Pittsburgh schedule, will be relished by the Pittsburgh players. Traynor will probably be able to take his place in the order when the St. Louis series starts at Forbes Field Tuesday.

The Oaklanders took a pasting from the Cubs yesterday, the invaders piling up a heavy total of tallies as they reached four home pitchers for 16 hits. Charley Root worked the entire game for the Bears, holding the Buccos to eight safeties. The score was 10 to 3.

Southpaw Fred Fussell essayed to tame the Bears. Fred had a lapse of control at the start and his little misfortune led to a big inning for the enemy. The Cubs made four tallies before Edwin Brame went to the rescue of the lefthander.

BRAME WILD.

Brame also was shy on control and he passed out of the picture in the third in favor of Walter Tauscher. Meantime, the Cubs had piled up eight markers. Tauscher was very impressive during his short stay, but there came a need for a pinch-hitter in the fourth, Fred Brickell batting for the Columbia recruit.

CHILLY SAUCE BY CHILLY DOYLE

times in nine battles, but the Cubs are only one game removed from the top of the league—and that, dear children, seems to be the big idea.

THAT 13-game winning streak spin by the McCarthy entry is likely to stand in the favor of the Cubs for many a long day. Twice last season the Pirates put over 11-game runs and when the final reckoning was made nobody would try to underestimate the value of the two spurts.

The Cubs, by the way, are the one team in the Heydler circuit making a cleanup in the way of cash. They are not enriching their coffers perceptibly in the present series, but they are turning them away on the old home lot.

IN four single contests with the Giants in Chicago the Cubs management cared for more than 100,000 admissions, according to the players, who appear to be well posted on this important matter. And on one of the dates threatening weather held the crowd down to 13,000.

One of the big reasons for the popularity of the Cubs at home may be seen on first base any day. Charles Galli Curci Grimm, coloratura first sacker, is hobbling about with a stone bruise on one of his feet, but he is playing the best ball of his career. Lefty should have had four hits yesterday, and the two southpaws did not seem to bother him much. He made three safeties and almost toppled Dick Bartell with a liner.

DAREDEVIL DICK was just as peppery as on the previous afternoon, but Charlie Root held him hitless. The youngster may encounter trouble in trying to hit the league's best pitchers, but he doesn't need to sport a Wright or Traynor average to stay "in there."

I. C. 4-A RECORDS FALL

wield a similar influence upon Leland Stanford's mighty team. Favorite today to romp off with the fifty-second Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championships for the second straight year and take the historic title back to the Pacific Coast for the seventh time in eight seasons.

Eric, the curly-headed sophomore who tosses the 16-pound shot and discus around with the same reckless abandon that Ruth hits home runs, was in record-breaking form in yesterday's trials, from the moment he stepped out on the Harvard turf to hurl the shot to a new record of 50 feet 1 inch, until, a few hours later he wound up a busy day by tossing the discus a new record distance of 154 feet 11 inches.

"As Krenz goes, so goes Stanford."

Eric sets the pace but he isn't the whole team, by any means. Twelve, and possibly 13 others, stood ready to contribute to Stanford's score, which experts expected to produce a one-sided victory for the Cardinals as well as to establish the highest point total in at least 10 years, if not 30 years.

It seemed probable to observers that Stanford, in spite of keen opposition from Yale, Southern California, Harvard, Pittsburgh and Cornell, would equal or surpass the 47-point modern mark, set by Cornell in 1918, and possibly threaten the all-time high mark of 57 points, registered by Pennsylvania in 1899.

PITT MEN PLACE

From out of the Allegheny foothills came five University of Pittsburgh athletes who won places in six finals. Ken Wibecan, the Panthers' Negro flyer, won his heats in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

Capt. Welch of Pitt placed fourth in the discus with a mark of 144 feet 10½ inches, and Don Gwinn, fourth in the hammer with a toss of 163 feet 4 inches. Pickard, the Pitt pole vaulter, also qualified for the finals today in that event.

Three championship meet records were shattered in the preliminaries, two of them by Krenz and a third by Al Bates of Penn State with a broad jump of 24 feet 10¾ inches. These, as well as other existing marks, faced further attack in the finals, scheduled to start this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Eastern daylight time.

ILLINOIS IN LEAD

EVANSTON, Ill., May 26.—(AP.)—With the finishing tape baited with Olympic game opportunity, 89 of the Big Ten's track and field stars centered their final assault on the record books and Western Conference championships at Dyche stadium today.

Coach Harry Gill's Illini team, with 21 qualifiers, was expected to defend successfully its conference team championship, with Iowa, Ohio State, Michigan, Northwestern and Wisconsin as chief opponents. The first to placers in each event will represent the conference in the coming Olympic track team trials.

OLYMPICS O. K. PRO SOCCER

AMSTERDAM, Holland, May 26.—(AP.)—The International Football Federation's world soccer championship in 1930 will be open to amateurs and professionals. Decision to this effect was reached at the federation's convention here on motion of the French delegates.

In supporting the French resolution, Dr. G. P. Manning, one of the American delegates, pointed out that some nations maintain that a few of the teams now sent to the Olympics should be classed at least as semi-professionals. Countries adhering strictly to the amateur rules are on an uneven basis with others. Other countries, it was pointed out, have professional teams which, however, are not eligible for the Olympics. In a free-for-all championship, the French and other delegates contended, each nation should be allowed to select what it considers its strongest aggregation.

Robertson Praises Stanford Giants

By LAWSON ROBERTSON,
Coach of the American Olympic Team.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 26.—(US.)—Two athletes from California's balmy clime walked leisurely almost unnoticed into the stadium here yesterday afternoon. When they walked out an hour or so later one was a new intercollegiate shotput record holder and a new discus record holder, and the other was credited with twice smashing the shotput old mark.

The new record man is Eric Krenz, of Leland Stanford, and a great performance was expected of him. He made good by hanging up the new mark of 50 feet 1 inch. The other man was Harlow P. Rothert, also of Leland Stanford, who was an unknown yesterday morning—an absolute sensation today. Krenz also smashed the discus record. He threw 154 feet 11 inches, beating the old mark of 151 feet 3⅝ inches.

Rothert made 49 feet ¼ inch in his first real try at the shotput. The next throw was 50 feet ½ inch. He duplicated his 50 feet ½ inch in his final effort, thus breaking the old intercollegiate record of 49 feet 11¾ inches twice in a single afternoon.

ROTHERT "UNKNOWN"

No one had really heard of him before in intercollegiate shotput circles. Yet in a single afternoon he flashed the most consistent one-day work of perhaps any man in shotput history.

The wonderful showing of Krenz and Rothert now gives America four mighty bows which it can use in its shotput arrow in the Amsterdam Olympics. The others are Schwarze, of Illinois A. C., and Kuck, of the Los Angeles A. C., who also have put the shot 50 feet or better.

Beyond the showings of the Leland Standford shot-putters nothing really sensational in the way of performance happened, nor was there much in the matter of "form upsets."

The time made in the dashes and the middle-distance heats was good, but nowhere near the records hung up in previous years.

This was due mainly to the fact that the track was rather slow from the rain of Thursday.

The qualifying height for pole-vaulting was 12 feet 6 inches, which was 6 inches lower than was necessary for the athletes of 1927, who leaped into the finals.

Sabin Carr, the man who vaulted 14 feet for Yale, cleared the 12 feet 6 with consummate ease. Lee Barnes, of Southern California, world's record-holder, also qualified without real effort. When the pair meet today in the finals a new world's record is possible, for this pair rank one to two in world's performance as pole-vaulters.

SPENCER IN TOP FORM

The qualifying height for the high jump was 5 feet 10½ inches, and the men who made good did it with ease. However, it does not seem likely that the high-jumpers of the year's intercollegiate will smash the mark of 6 feet 5¾ inches.

Emerson Spencer of Leland Stanford, who made a new world's record in the 400 meters a few weeks ago, flashed all his brilliance, winning one of the 440 heats in fast time and without being pressed to his limit. Ray Barbuti of Syracuse, and Launcelot Ross, of Yale, had no real trouble winning their heats. It looks as if the finals today will furnish a great battle among the set here.

The men who survived the eliminations include practically the starriest of collegiate stars and when all these satellites meet up today in the definite fight for championships, it seems certain that some of the old records will be beaten. If the track dries out the Borahs, the Emersons and the others are likely to clip off the old running marks.

John Clevenger has competed in races hereabouts for several years and his appearance at Bridgeville next Wednesday afternoon should make a decided hit with the followers of the dangerous racing sport.

All drivers have reported their cars tuned up for the qualifying trials scheduled at Bridgeville next Tuesday afternoon. The fastest 12 cars in the 50-mile race, the first on the program, the four leaders to meet in the final race of 25 miles. TRADER HORN—THE GREATEST STORY OF ADVENTURE OF MODERN TIMES

She Sails for Her New Home With Her Husband, Trader Horn Waving Adieu

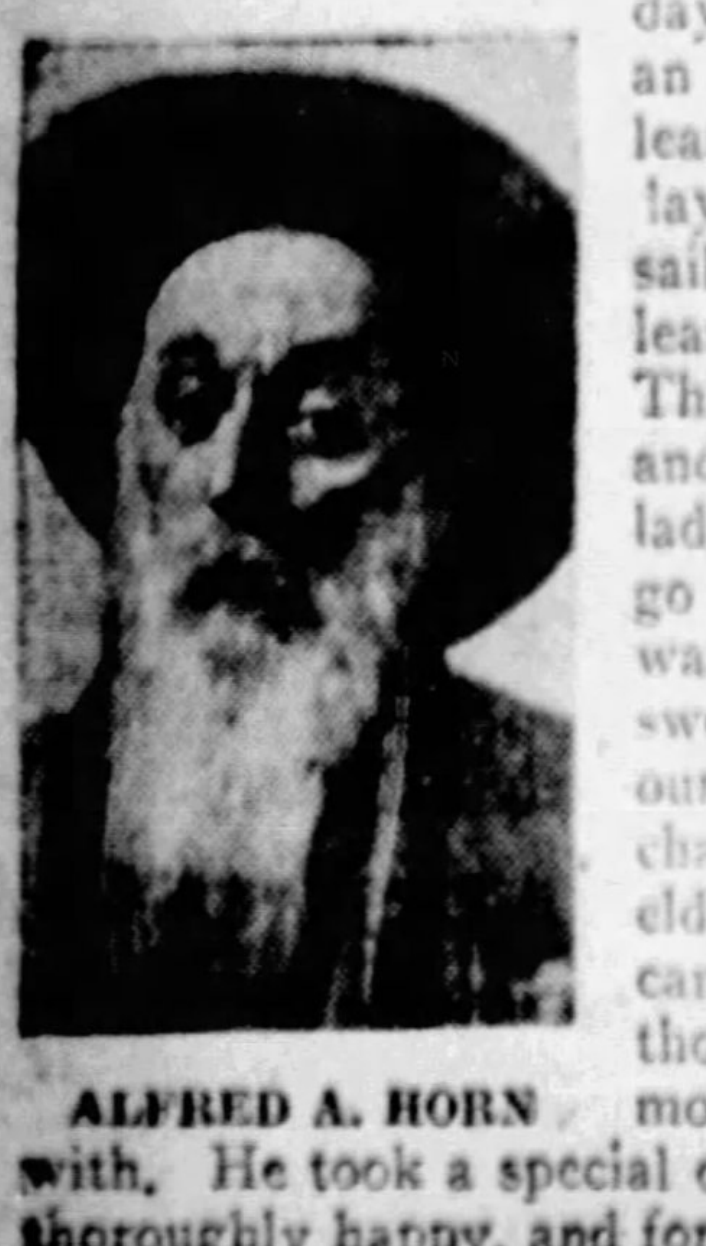
What Has Gone Before.

An old man now, Trader Horn has written the story of his life on the Ivory Coast of Africa where he rescued from the temple of the Isogas a White Goddess, Nina T——, descendant of an aristocratic English family. Risk of horrible death was taken by Horn and his school-time friend, Little Peru, in liberating the girl. A coin is tossed to see which shall marry her. Peru wins; they are married at sea en route to Europe by the ship captain.

White-Haired Trader Says, "Ta-Ta"

By ALFRED ALOYSIUS HORN
Edited by ETHELREDA LEWIS.

CHAPTER XLII.



ALFRED A. HORN

WE WERE all sorry when the good ship dropped anchor in Funchall and we had to part with our sailor friends.

The tender came alongside, and our luggage was handed out to the representative of Reeds, the principal hotel in those days at Madeira. Here we learnt that an American vessel bound for New Orleans would be due on the following day and would coal and provision and sail as soon as possible for New Orleans. She was a steamer from Liberia. This was good news for the newly wed, and Peru booked berths for himself and lady. He still was anxious for me to go with him to Peru. This, I told him, was out of the question, as I was answering a mother's call. The rest of our time we put in visiting old Funchall. The American captain was an elderly man. He was a Virginian and came to see us at Reeds. He was a thorough gentleman and one of the most jovial men I ever came in contact with. He took a special delight in seeing his passengers were thoroughly happy, and for wit and humor he was hard to beat.

Peru was busy telegraphing to his guardian and agent, and it took him quite a considerable time before he had finished his communications.

He explained to me what he intended to do on his return to his home in Lima and also told me that now he had come of age he had received a thorough statement as to how he stood financially. In fact, he was far richer than ever he had imagined, as since the death of his father his guardian had been very economical and had proved himself to be not only a father to him, but had speculated his interest in sound securities and his interests amounted to several millions.

Of course, I promised that I would visit him and his wife in Peru, but could not promise to stay with him for good, as I intended if possible to do all I could to satisfy my people in business and I had quite a lot to learn before I should feel satisfied that I could help in any way. Especially in the help he needed, High Finance.

Nina would have nothing to do with the Ruby which was very valuable, in fact she believed it would be the cause of bad luck if she wore it, as she wanted to forget the life of anxiety she had lived as a godess.

In fact she begged me to accept the Stone and keep it from her sight for ever. She was happy as a woman could be and wanted to forget the days she had spent a Sacred prisoner. This, of course, she could forget and she was anxious to see her husbands native land where she wished to live and die in thorough happiness.

We enjoyed our stay in Reeds Hotel Funchall and were loth to part with our kind host.

And now came the time of our parting. The young people took their place aft close to the American flag. The last whistle now sounded and Peru gave me a rib-breaking squeeze I shall never forget, whilst the Lady his wife, and who knows what her rightful title might be had her father lived she might have become a Dutchess or other coroneted Person, showered me with hugs and kisses and overcome with emotion she fell in her husbands arms the silver tears falling as I hurriedly left.

On reaching the tender they were cast loose and I waved them adieus as long as I could see them. I felt I had lost my best friends in the world and hoped from my heart that dame fortune, who had linked these two orphans together, would be with them to the end in their home in the valley of the Andes.

(And now Trader Horn, having finished his romantic story, wonders how the public will receive his work. He thus voices his thoughts to Mrs. Lewis:)

A Tale Dressed Up

"Well, Ma'am, the finale at last. I should like to know what impression it leaves on the reader . . .

"You think it up to the mark? You've been right through it, I suppose? Well, it's a fait accompli at last.

"I'm not denying it may differ somewhat from the actual truth of that getaway. But whatever would it have looked like to see 'my friend came over from South America and we managed to abduct George T——'s daughter from the Josh house, after which he married her at Madeira and they took the first available boat to Lima via New Orleans.'

"'Twould never 'a' done. All people like a little levity in literature. If you're going to write a book of the world as it is you may as well leave levity out. But it'll not sell.

"That feller Peru was of good stock. So the marriage was suitable in every way. The way that girl looked at the world! Shops in Madeira and so on and Peru buying as fast as he can for her. Table d'hote at the hotel. Aye, she was all eyes. She hadn't wanted to leave the Coast, but when she did she was happy as a child at a flower show.

"When we first broached the idea of going abroad she said she only wanted to live at Cape Lopez.

"That girl had her failings and she must have had her memories. She'd not touch that ruby. It became mine and I made a good bit on it later at Tiffany's, when I heard Peru was to be there to sell it for me. But not so well as I might. It was big but had flaws in it; spoilt its value. Still, it'd never do to put that in. Accuracy in money matters is as important in books as in financial circles.

"The Americans won't look at a book isn't accurate in details. So I've had to name a suitable price for the ruby—I forgot now, just what it was I mentioned.

"Of course I'm not denying I'm more at home on my rivers than chasing after romance . . . What's this, Ma'am? Let me get my glasses and I'll read it."

"My Muni River"

At the mention of rivers I had remembered a cutting I had saved for Mr. Horn. Quite early in our partnership I found that suggestive cuttings from the newspapers would often unlock little doors in his memory which otherwise might never have opened. I give the paragraph below:

"Madrid: Sunday—An expedition headed by Gen. Nunez Deprado, and including two aviators and a group of engineers, doctors and writers, started from the island of Elobey, off West Coast of Africa, for the Spanish territory of Muni on the mainland, to hunt elephants and wild game. They are now about to cross the region of the Benito cataracts, where there are stated to be many herds of gorillas.

"It is common talk in the Spanish colony that these animals have a human captive, believed to be a woman, whom they keep in the mountains. The members of the expedition propose to beat the country and scale the hills if necessary in order to rescue the captive.

"Natives state that they have heard human voices and signals made from a distance, evidently by some distressed person."

"Why—why, ma'am—that's my Muni River! My Muni River! Now you see that it's true about my rivers!"

His hands shook and the tears rushed to his eyes.

"My Muni River, it means 'You shake as you dance! You shake as you dance!'

"Haven't I been [illegible] this time about it? A river can't keep still, it's so full of falls and cataracts. Right down from the mountains it comes. Muni . . . The dancing river . . .

'Mime J'ra Gogo.' . . .

I know that far-off place! Excuse me, my voice is a bit thin today.

"They called me River-Hawk up there.

'Mime J'ra Gogo.' . . .

'A young man like me, I'm tired of seeking pleasures that are far, far away!' That's what it means.

"Aye, sometimes I think I'll walk straight out over the veld as the eagle flies and when my legs stop lie down to a natural end. I'd sooner be picked up by the vultures than by life in this so-called city, and there'd be no looking back. I'd know better than Lot's wife. No looking back across the plains for me, once safely with my eyes to the blue.

"'I know that far-off place,' I could take you there, ma'am. It'd sure impress you. Ingwe Yani they used to call me on the Muni River.

"Excuse me laughing at this bit of newspaper rant. A herd of gorillas is what these gentlemen will never see unless they've been drinking somewhat. Families, no herds, is what a gorilla believes in. He's got a man's instinct for a home.

"He'll not live as if he were in a tenement. No, and he'll not intermarry too closely either. He's a few shades better than a poor white, that'll marry his aunt if she lives next door rather than give himself the trouble to go farther afield for a mate. A gorilla'll visit five colonies in rotation to avoid interbreeding. A regular scientist.

"And these fellers think they're first with one o' my rivers . . .

"I could sing you songs from Muni River still, Ma'am. There's that one that goes 'the voice of the bird has turned the lake to sunshine'—Wait—let me chase the tune of it . . .

"'Silver shadows in a yellow moon.' That was a pretty one on the water, too . . . Twenty singers and harps in a canoe.

"Harps in the Isoga house, too.

"The ghosts are listening and cetera and so forth and you catch the tinkle of the harps.

"That's how it goes when you're being initiated. Same as any other church. Touch the soul with music and they'll believe the words.

"But it's on the water that they pray the sweetest.

'Spirits, inhabit your place in happiness and trouble us not;
'Listen to the words we sing to thee while passing—'

Their pretty supplications'd sure fetch a god from anywhere, wherever he may be lurking.

And So, Ta-Ta!

"Aye, but they mean it so! Like children calling for someone to answer when the house is too quiet. They fear stillness like all primevals. Nature must 'a' smiled when she heard the first harp—whether it might be Orpheus or a Pangwe warrior patrolling his river. How else could she express her pretty thoughts but by bird and man?

"Where they got that heavenly incentive from I don't know. It gets to the core, like Beethoven. And the harps waft the canoes along with the rhythm of it.

"When you see the poor make of white man'd call for benediction 'tis no wonder if the Great Onlooker is prone to give the blacks an opportunity to make good. Who knows but what He looks to the Ethiopian to give the world another chance? Clever fellers, the west coast native.

"Well, Ma'am, I mustn't keep you with my remembrances. There's some'd call me childish, but any writer knows how you've got to keep looking over your shoulder at Yesterday. Same as an artist's eye roves over his subject to wring the meaning from it.

"Will it be very long now before the book is in view of the public? Excuse me mentioning it. Slips come easy when your grasp is gone.

"Well, Ma'am, I must be getting along to goodbye. Or shall I say ta-ta?

"Excuse my jocularity. It's often no more than a bit of armor over the feelings, naturally hidden by every man that knows the pangs of gratitude.

"You've saved my life this winter but it's not a subject to dwell on without embarrassment. A warm coat and something to do'll go a long way towards sanity. The hope that comes from a literary horizon is of a breed harder to kill than most. You have sure spread a blazon of sunshine in an old man's path.

"Aye! And all from that gridiron I was twisting up one Sunday morning in my room, not knowing its peculiar properties. I knew you never wanted it."

Rubber Institute Sound Idea; Doherty an Example

—By B. C. FORBES—

INTEREST in stocks has risen as prices have shown they can fall.

A London costermonger's donkey one day lay down on the street and died. He coaxed and kicked in an effort to get it to rise. When there was no response, he finally shook his head and remarked, "Blimey, 'e never been gone done that before."

Several million novices who are in the market for the first time are beginning to feel as the costermonger felt—puzzled that it should fall down and not instantly rise and trot along again at a satisfactory pace. Which recalls—at least to my mind—the chestnut about the Negro who was bragging about all that he had travelled and seen. His friend asked if he had ever had the D. T.'s. On being told "no," came the exclamation, "Then, Nigga, you all ain't seen nuthin' yet."

From which you will perhaps gather that the writer is disposed to doubt that the market is through slipping back.

THE simple—perhaps it will prove too simple—logic I employ is that the market having soared to absolutely unprecedented heights and having attracted more millions of buyers than ever before, the downward movement, when it starts in earnest, is likely to be correspondingly broad and severe. There is at least some truth in Roger Babson's favorite declaration, "action and reaction are always equal."

The Bulls tell us, however, that all old things—including, apparently, all old truths—have passed away that all things have been made new. Their pet song is "Nothing but blue skies from now on."

At that they may prove right and this canny writer prove wrong. Wisenheimers who know a thing can't be done are sometimes made ridiculous by darn fools who, not knowing it couldn't be done, have gone ahead and done it.

TALK of "drafting" Coolidge is reviving. Perhaps the wish is father to the thought. Republicans who cannot enthuse over Hoover are getting scared over Smith's triumphant progress. Hoover's nomination is not being taken for granted, by any means. Dawes is still spoken of as the ace in the hole—if Coolidge balks.

One of these days Wall Street will experience—or profess to experience—a political scare.

DON'T soar into the clouds to buy this, that and the next air stock. Most of them will fall back to earth with a thud.

Formation of a rubber institute by American manufacturers should prove wise. The idea is sound. But all will depend on how it is operated.

The rubber industry has not been soundly prosperous for years. There have been too many violent ups and downs, too much speculating in raw material, too much production, too much price-cutting. Our own manufacturers have been only partly to blame—British price-regulating tactics have been in some measure responsible.

If Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews (formerly assistant secretary of the treasury) acts judiciously as director general, the institute should prove helpful to the industry and to America without hurting consumers of tires and other rubber goods. Avarice would inevitably bring on trouble.

BIG business, as I see it, is on trial. The public are displaying patience. But they are following events closely, scrutinizingly. Gigantic mergers are being permitted, without public protest, in industry, transportation, utilities, banking, merchandising. So is the organization of all kinds of trade associations and institutes. Without interference or question, workers can be discharged by the thousand. Indeed, high finance and big business are being given by the public all the rope they want.

By and by, however, a verdict on all that is going on will be delivered. What that verdict will be rests mainly with a few powerful leaders in each line.

HENRY L. DOHERTY, the tremendously energetic creator and upbuilder of scores of utility and oil properties under the fold of cities service, used to work 48 hours and even more at a stretch when engaged on some hard problem. All night work was commonplace with him. He reached high places, of course. But at the cost of his health. It gave way months ago and now to win it back is the hardest problem Henry L. has ever had to tackle.

Commended to the attention of a few other human dynamos before too late.

Stock Exchange Again Closes to Catch Up

Stock exchanges throughout the country are closed again today, the sixth Saturday this year on which trading has been suspended to permit brokerage houses to catch up on work accumulated during the enormous markets of the past three months. The New York Stock Exchange, the New York Curb and several interior stock markets observed the four-hour day this week, closing one hour earlier, but this schedule has been abrogated and all of these institutions will operate on the usual five-hour basis beginning Monday. Banks and the commodity markets are in operation as usual today.

ATLANTA BANK RAISES RATE

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(INS.)—The Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank yesterday increased its rediscount rate from 4 to 4½ per cent. San Francisco is the only reserve bank still retaining the 4 per cent rate.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, May 26.—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 1 to 5 points, active months selling about 9 to 10 points net lower in early trading under realizing or liquidation. Offerings were light, and uncertainty as to weather conditions over the week-end brought in a little buying which sent prices back to yesterday's closing quotations, October selling up from 20.62 to 20.71 by the end of the first hour.

Owing to the holiday there were no quotations from Liverpool to influence sentiment here either way, and much of the early trading was attributed to the closing out of commitments for over the week end.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 99,765 bales, against 118,271 last year.

DOUBLE WRECK ON BOULEVARD KILLS ONE

John Wolfe, 35, of 1554 Clayton avenue, North Side, Pittsburgh service manager of the American LaFrance Fire Engine Company, was killed last night in an automobile collision in Bigelow boulevard near Washington place. He was thrown through the windshield of his automobile when it collided head-on with a car driven by L. R. Jadeja, 29, of 323 Robinson street, Oakland. Four persons in Jadeja's car were hurt.

Jadeja, cut on the eye, was not seriously injured. Miss Margaret Miller, 16, also of 323 Robinson street; Miss Alice Fischer, 15, of 337 Robinson street; Kumar Jadeja, 25, a brother of the driver, and Mrs. Raphalia Jadeja, 24, of 323 Robinson street, were taken to Passavant Hospital. After receiving attention for cuts and bruises, Miss Fischer and Mrs. Jadeja left. Miss Miller was cut on the right shoulder.

When Wolfe was hurled through the windshield, his machine with no one at the wheel crashed against a car driven by Joseph Schwartz of 25 Kirkwood street. Schwartz's wife and three childen in the car were unhurt.

Rudolph Gavran, 3, of Paola way, was fatally injured yesterday by a machine in Preble avenue in front of the Woods Run Police Station. He was taken to St. John's Hospital in vain by Philip Angelair of 625 Washington avenue, Bridgeville, whose machine struck him. Angelair was released under bond pending a coroner's inquest.

Physicians of the Allegheny General Hospital this morning said that Marjorie Thompson, 8, of 119 East General Robinson street, apparently would recover from severe cuts and bruises suffered when she was struck by an automobile at Cedar avenue and Avery street yesterday.

PRESS FIGHT ON ANNEXATION

Hearing of proponents and opponents concerning the annexation to Pittsburgh of a portion of Ross township, near West View, was resumed yesterday in Quarter Sessions Court before Judge George V. Moore. Objectors charge the 561 signers to the annexation petition approved by City Council March 22 do not constitute 60 per cent of the taxables, of the area as required by law.

Witnesses said names of 902 taxables were on the list when presented, and that additions had raised the number now to 949. Gottleib Self, tax collector, absent from the previous hearing, testified regarding the list of taxables. Annexationists have attacked a number of listed taxables. The hearing will be resumed Monday.

MOTHER KEEPS CHILD

MRS. DOROTHY MATTHEWS

A hearing in a habeas corpus proceeding for the possession of Mary Catherine Matthews, aged 1 month, terminated abruptly in Common Pleas Court when Judge John A. Evans interrupted the testimony by announcing: "My mind is made up and I am giving this child to its mother, to whom it rightfully belongs." Application for a writ of habeas corpus had been made by Mrs. Dorothy Matthews through her counsel, E. E. McMonigle. During the last week the child had been in custody of her mother-in-law. William R. Matthews is the father. Mrs. Dorothy Matthews testified that she had refused to live in the house with her mother-in-law at Keown Station.

BALLOON RACER REACHES CITY

The vanguard of Army and Navy pilots who will compete in the national balloon races at Bettis Field on Memorial Day arrived in Pittsburgh yesterday in the person of Lieut. James H. Stephens, senior officer of the Navy team which will race two of the five government balloons.

Stephens, a former Pittsburgher, arrived here from the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., quarters of the dirigible Los Angeles, which is expected to fly here for the races if the weather is clear.

Other contributions which the government is making to the big air derby include parachute jumps and stunt flying. The program will begin at 10 a. m., when thousands of feet of gas will be poured into the huge bags, and will end at 7 p. m., when the last of the 14 balloons will take off.

Lieut. Frank McKee, operations officer for the races, announced today that Sunday visitors at Bettis Field will see the transformed field, with its thousands of seats, many of the crated balloons and the vanguard of airplanes.

JUST KIDS CLUB 5,000 STRONGER

The desire to join the "Just Kids Safety Club," recently organized by the Sun-Telegraph and based on Ad Carter's comic pictures, "Just Kids," which appear in this newspaper every day, is spreading like wildfire among the children. Two days ago the membership was 5,000; today it is 10,000.

Parents are no less enthusiastic than the "kids" over the new club. They think it is one of the best plans ever invented to make the youngsters careful. On being admitted to membership the children must promise to "remember to look up and down before crossing the street." Abundant evidence is at hand that the children are taking the pledge very seriously.

Whole neighborhoods are applying for membership. Here is a characteristic note that accompanied a sheaf of coupons:

"The 'kids' in the neighborhood seem to have appointed me as 'district manager,' as they are coming to me to help fill out their blanks. My 'kids' received their membership buttons and believe in advertising.

"I suppose you take it for granted I am Scotch, sending so many blanks in one envelope.

"I hope your club will be a lasting success and that the 'kids' don't forget to remember.

"MRS. EMMETT G. GARBART,
"New Eagle, Pa."

Children of the "Just Kids Safety Club" at Derry, Pa., plan to have safety zone captains for certain streets.

Cecil Anderson, a member of the club at Oak Hill, Elizabeth, Pa., had written a poem about it.

The interesting developments in the club are indeed so numerous that space limitations prevent even mentioning more than a few of them.

Any child can join by filling the application in the coupon, obtaining the indorsement of father, mother or other grown-up, and sending it to Miss Safety, care of The Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Attractive membership buttons are being sent out as fast as Miss Safety and her helpers can handle the applications.

SEIZED BALLOT BOXES NEEDED

Allegheny county is short ballot boxes for use at the special county $42,650,000 bond election June 26. Unless the senatorial committee conducting an investigation of the vote cast in the election fight between William S. Vare, Republican, and William B. Wilson, Democrat, in 1926, returns more than 1,000 boxes impounded the county will have to purchase new ones.

County Commissioners today sent a letter to the committee asking the return of at least 600 of the containers. To make this number would cost $2,500.

Contracts for printing ballots for the special election were awarded to William G. Johnston Co. for $8,350.

The National Vaudeville Association is appealing to the public for funds. The money will be used to send vaudeville artists to sanitariums, and in some cases to bury them. There are many pitiful cases, like the above. Wouldn't you gladly help to send them to a sanitarium? Although the committee does not say so, an attempt will be made to let donators decide which artists shall be buried.

Voting Machine Approval By Politicians Expected

Indorsement of the constitutional amendment permitting the use of voting machines in Pennsylvania is expected to be given by Allegheny county Republicans at their organization meeting today. There have been rumors that political leaders in favor of indorsing the movement will not be opposed by the "die-hards," giving the organization a chance to fall in line gracefully and get into step with modern thought.

In doing this the county Republicans, if they do indorse the amendment, will be only furthering a project put before the people by a majority of members of their own party in the Legislature. It is too late for obstructors now, except as their action may influence unthinking voters, so climbing on the band wagon is more or less of a formality.

Nevertheless an action that might be classed as "surrender" by some of the old guard still will have some virtue. Support by a political organization will give that satisfaction that additional numbers bring to the civic and commercial bodies which already have indorsed the amendment.

White Collar

It Is No Longer the Fetish It Once Was.

A most significant fact is set forth in the annual report of the New York superintendent of schools. It is that there are more than 3,000 pupils who want vocational training but cannot get it for lack of room.

A job is not all of life. It is, however, the foundation. And the fitting of young people to do good and useful work, quite apart from its value in money, can be quite as cultural as any other form of study or training.

The average span of schooling in this country reaches only to the sixth grade, because so many pupils have to stop going to school at that point in order to go to work.

If the schooling and the work could be more closely guarded there would be a gain all around.

We are already emerging from the white collar fetish. The youth who prepares to put skill and character into manual toil today faces better rewards with less loss of prestige than ever before.

It is time to give the hand-minded a better chance.

Father, Mother and Child

Strange Family in the Field Museum.

COULD THESE BE OUR RELATIVES? HARDLY.

This shows you a gorilla family, captured in Africa by the great hunter, Carl E. Akeley, stuffed and mounted, as natural as life, in Chicago's Field Museum of Natural History. This photograph gives us all food for thought, no matter what we may think about Darwin and the so-called "monkey theory."

Father gorilla, most powerful two-legged animal on earth, is peaceful. If you don't attack him, he will let you alone. That is more than you can say for some of his alleged descendants with bigger brains and smaller mouths.

Also, this big gorilla is a FAITHFUL husband. Once mated, he interests himself in no female gorilla except his OWN. That also is more than you can say for some other two-legged creatures.

The learned editor of The Sun-Telegraph speaks of this family of gorillas as "man's nearest animal relative."

You will read about that in The Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow, but it is all a matter of opinion.

Present scientific theory says that three of the biggest, most intelligent monkeys are the ancestors of three great divisions of the human race.

You ought to read about that in a little book called "The Mongol in Our Midst," by F. G. Crookshank, published by E. P. Dutton & Co.

According to that book, well supported by scientific facts, the gorilla is the ancestor of the AFRICAN race, the orangoutang is the ancestor of the MONGOLIAN race, including the Chinese, and the chimpanzee is the ancestor of our WHITE race.

Incidentally that might explain our companionate marriage ideas. The chimpanzee is said to be the least moral, least well behaved of all the higher races of monkeys.

Onward

When Great Britain holds its next election, some time next year, every person not in jail and more than 21 may vote. The total includes 14,250,000 women and 12,250,000 men, or 26,500,000 in a population of 43,000,000.

Compare this with Britain in the time of George III. The population was 8,000,000; the number eligible to vote merely 160,000. One-half of the members of the House of Commons were elected by only 11,500 voters. In six districts there were but three votes each. Neither Manchester nor Birmingham had a representative.

Narrowness of the franchise was not the worst scandal. Two-fifths of the Parliament in George's time held offices by direct gift from him and voted as he willed. If he needed more votes he bought them.

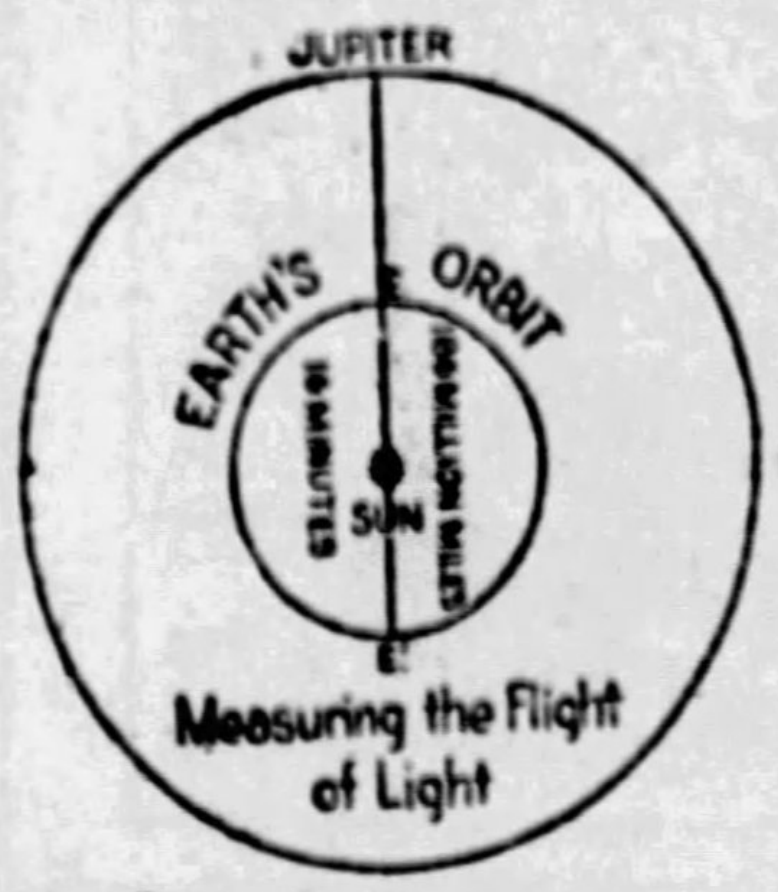
Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Light's Flight

"How do we know that light travels only 186,000 miles per second out in space when our measurements were made here on the earth against atmospheric pressure? Is that a satisfactory test to show that light does not travel faster from star to star, or planet to planet?—W. E. L., Cameron, W. Va."

OUR knowledge of the velocity of light is not based solely on measurements made on the earth. On the contrary, the first proof that light takes time to move through space and the first measurement of its velocity were furnished by observations relating to its movement outside the earth.

In 1675 a Danish astronomer named Roemer noticed that the eclipses of Jupiter's satellites by the shadow of that planet varied in their times of occurrence in accordance with the changing distance between Jupiter and the earth. From this he deduced the fact that light must move at a definite and measurable speed in traversing interplanetary space.



It is not to the credit of European science at that time that for half a century Roemer's discovery was neglected. In 1725 Bradley, in England, discovered that as the earth moves around the sun all the stars shift their places in a way only to be explained by taking into account the ratio of the earth's orbital velocity to the velocity of light in space. From the measured angle of shift, which amounts to a little less than twenty and one-half seconds of arc, the velocity of light in interstellar space is found to be about 10,000 times the velocity of the earth in its orbit.

Here, again, we have a method which determines the velocity of light outside the earth and its atmosphere. We know that light waves are slightly delayed by air resistance, but all attempts to find any general obstruction to the passage of light through outer space have failed. The precise measurements made by physicists on the earth, when corrected for the known diminution caused by the atmosphere, are in substantial agreement with the accepted estimate of the velocity of light in space, viz. about 186,000 miles per second.

The principle of Roemer's discovery is illustrated in our sketch. Jupiter goes around the sun in an orbit far outside that of the earth. When the two planets are in conjunction on the same side of the sun, as when the earth is at "E," the eclipses of Jupiter's satellites are seen to occur relatively about 16 2-3 minutes earlier than they do when the earth is in opposition to Jupiter, viz., at "E'." But "E'" is farther from Jupiter than is "E" by the distance across the earth's orbit. Light, then, has to travel that much farther in the one case than in the other.

Now, the diameter of the earth's orbit is about 186,000,000 miles, and light takes about 1,000 seconds to cross it; hence the velocity of light between Jupiter and the earth must be about 186,000 miles per second—186,000,000/186,000.

Indispensable

WE'RE not at all sure that Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick should be allowed to demolish a venerable and cherished memory.

She says the famous cave man was a myth; that instead of his dragging the woman off by the hair she, as a matter of fact, dragged him in by the whiskers.

It would serve a whisker right to meet such a fate. But it deflates too many fond illusions of the pompous male to let this cave man theory be punctured without a struggle.

Besides, contemporary life confirms the fascination of the strong man. You rarely see a throng of either sex trailing adoringly a masculine wash-out.

No; we must insist on the ancient tradition. If the cave man never lived, modern society would have to invent one.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Social Grade

YOU are not pleased with some of the men you meet in your club, your lodge or your church.

Often you wonder how these men came to be admitted.

You feel that they are far below the grade of intelligence and standing of those you think should be members of your organizations.

By what rule do you establish such an opinion?

Is it from the standpoint of their small incomes?

Quite likely this is your basis.

But it is an unfair basis upon which to judge, that of whether a man has made money or has well-paying securities.

Without knowing a man's conditions, what he has had to face, you catalogue him by his material possessions.

A shallow method of establishing the real worth of a person.

If a man aspires to membership in leading organizations and is active in church work, these are points in his favor.

He desires to mingle with the kind of men he thinks these clubs or lodges represent and he would be disappointed if he thought any of these men look upon him as you do.

Glad, Brave Way

THE years are heights whereon I climb
From hour to hour to peaks sublime,
Through toil, through pain
I slowly gain
The sun-bright eminence of time.

And when, from upward roads that wind,
I look to valleys far behind,
At last I read
In dream and deed
The use which once I failed to find.

More gladly now my way I go;
More bravely, too, for well I know
From far years' heights
Dark days, sad nights
A fair design at last will show.

Dentistry vs. Artistry—Pulling a man's tooth by hypnotism may be painless, but pulling a man's leg by the same process is usually followed by a headache.

Tales that are Told

Very Potent

AN AMERICAN doing London ordered a cocktail in the hotel bar. His choice was a specialty called the "Stars and Stripes."

When served he saw that the drink was composed of liqueurs of varying densities, the whole producing an effect of stripes.

"That's all right for the stripes," remarked the American, holding the glass up in front of him, "but what about the stars?"

The man behind the bar grinned broadly.

"Drink the cocktail," he advised, "and you'll see all the stars!"—Exchange.

A One-Sided Affair

CHARGED with driving a motor car at night with only one light, and that on the near side, the disconsolate motorists faced the magistrate.

They pleaded guilty and were fined £4 and costs. The magistrate advised them to be more careful in the future.

"Vell," said the first, "the easiest way to settle the matter is for each of us to pay half. Ve both was in the car at the time, and it belongs to both of us."

But his friend objected.

"No, no," he protested. "My side vasn't out."—London Answers.

Bad Company for Him

A SCOT haled before the court for drunkenness gave as his excuse that he had traveled from Glasgow in bad company.

"What sort of company?" asked the magistrate.

"A lot of teetotallers," was the startling response.

"What, sir!" said the magistrate. "Do you mean to say that abstainers are bad company? I think they are the best company for such as you."

"Beggin' your pardon," answered the Scot, "ye're wrong, sir, for I had a whole bottle o' whusky an' I had to drink it by mysel'."—London Answers.

Not Very Plentiful

FARMER JOHN GILES sent his youngest son into the miller's with a sample of his crop of wheat.

The miller took it inside and made a very careful examination. He was delighted with the result, for the wheat was the finest he had seen for some time.

"This is splendid wheat, young man," he murmured to the farmer's son. "I'd like to buy it from your father. How much has he got like this, do you think?"

The boy was not long in making a calculation.

"Not much," he replied slowly. "He spent all the morning picking that out."

Face Value

THE office boy, though not lazy, could scarcely be called energetic, and finally his employer decided that perhaps it would be best for him to talk to the youth himself.

He sent for the lad.

"Now, look here, young man," he began, when the delinquent appeared. "You know you're inclined to be slack. The boy I had before you was worth about twice as much as you—"

"Perhaps he was, sir," interrupted the lad; "but I'll bet he didn't get it!"

So Very Subtle

THEY were both clerks in the city, and neither had left school very long.

In the course of conversation they discovered they had a mutual acquaintance. Thereafter the conversation centered upon the latter.

"Of course," said the first boy, "George has been up here for over six months. He told me a week ago that he was working for all he was worth, too."

"Really," returned his friend. "I suppose that is George's way of saying he's only earning thirty shillings a week."

Curiosity is only vanity. Most often we only wish to know in order to talk about it.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 26.—An agitation is on to change the name of New York's famous prison—the Tombs. Argument is advanced that the psychological effect is a deterrent to prisoners, the name suggesting the death of hope and numbing inclination to better resolves.

It has been discovered that a large majority of hardened criminals paid their penalties for first offenses in the Tombs. It is the contention of prison welfare workers that the chief hope of criminal regeneration is to turn prisoners into respectable paths when released as first offenders.

After two or three terms the task becomes almost impossible and it is the mental outlook of the first offender that needs to be saved from the paralyzing effect of the notion that he has become a social outcast. The designation—the Tombs, it is claimed, helps foster this idea.

The sullen architecture of the Tombs is as depressing as its name, and gives the impression its designers took some sort of fiendish delight in making the structure cold and menacing. Silhouetted in a falling dusk, the drab slate-gray pile becomes shuddery.

That it has stirred the most desperate revolts is evidenced by numerous bloody and fearless outbreaks. In perhaps no other American prison, save Folsom in California, have prisoners concocted such hazardous schemes or so willingly risked their necks to escape.

Almost every year there is a Tombs "break." The prisoners are treated no better or no worse than in other penal institutions, but its atmosphere is so sombre that the moment they are placed behind its high spiked walls they begin plotting for freedom.

Even the surrounding area of the Tombs seems affected by its grimness. Lafayette street is a jungle of activity, save for several blocks north or south of the Tombs, where there is unexplained desolation. And the musty structure leading over the highway from the Tombs to the Criminal Courts building, and known as The Bridge of Sighs, does not add joy to the gloom.

Three gentlemen in as many blocks stopped me today to inquire if they were on Fifth avenue. They were on Madison avenue. What is this—a monkey business?

There is something about New York that breeds a suspicion by any untoward action of strangers. Most of us, no matter how long we have lived here, have a pronounced Rube complex. We are keyed up to the idea that any little experience out of the usual is another trick, and that we will be the victims. And as likely as not that is what it turns out to be.

My idea of luxury is that of a New Yorker who buys three seats to the theater for himself and wife. The extra seat is used as a place to put their hats and wraps.

And the keenest disappointment of the week was experienced by a lady just returning from Paris. She purchased what she had been guaranteed was an absolutely exclusive gown. It was the model and no more were to be made. At the ship's gala night she appeared in the frock, and after noting six exactly like it in every detail and coloring and made, inquiry revealed, by the same dressmaker, she remained in her cabin for the rest of the voyage. Not exactly angry or hurt, you understand—but just as mad as hops.

Due to the artificial tanning processes, society no longer considers it smart to be the brown of an autumn leaf.

That's a pretty dull paragraph. I often wish a columnist when he feels himself slipping could resort to some theatrical trick—like waltzing with a huge ostrich fan—to sustain interest.

The Age of Faith

By DR. FRANK CRANE

This, and not the Middle Ages, is the age of great faith.

Mr. Will C. Wood, State Bank Examiner, said the other day in an address, that men had never had such faith in one another as they have today. This was the expression of a business man and not of a preacher, and it illustrates the fact that the faith business is passing out of the hands of the preachers and is going into everybody's hands.

We often hear the dark ages referred to as the ages of great faith. The time of Dante, of Christopher Columbus and of St. Louis was supposed to be the time when men believed and were more trusting than they are today.

They believed all right, but they believed a lot of junk that wasn't true. They believed a lot of totems and taboos which science has since dissipated. They believed in a literal hell of fire and a literal heaven, where people were occupied in making up in indulgence what they had missed in this life.

Faith in all these things has disappeared, largely, but there never was a time in the history of the world when men had more faith that counts and that brings results than today.

For they have faith in one another as they never had before and the important thing is for us to trust one another more than to trust Providence or trust luck or some superstition.

The Hottentots of Africa believe in the witch doctors, but it doesn't do them any good. Savages believe in dances and all sorts of hocus-pocus to appease the gods, just as in ancient times they believed in slaughtering bullocks and rams that the Deity might be appeased by the smell of blood.

Nowadays the whole enormous fabric of credit is built upon faith. The motto of Shakespeare, "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," if heeded nowadays would put every bank out of business.

The commercial transactions of the world are largely managed by borrowed money and the enormous department stores, most of them, prosper because most people keep their word.

Peace, so ardently desired by all nations, is not going to come until we have faith in each other. In spite of ancient superstitions and jealousies that exist we are coming to believe in one another more than ever before.

There is more religion of the residual and practical kind now in the world than there ever was before.

A little reflection will show that this isn't such a bad world after all and it is getting better.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

From the Slime to a Star

SIT down and be humble—two weeds are going to talk to you.

There's that common plant you've seen hundreds of times, growing along railroad tracks—"equisetum sylvaticum" the wise men have named it, but the youngsters call it "horsetail rush." Queer-looking thing—isn't it? With its gritty, scaly stem sticking up from the ground like a knobbed twig, until it branches into rough, greenish tufts. And its history is even queerer than it looks, for that common horsetail rush is about the oldest plant on earth.

Long before the hot, young earth was able to produce flowering, seed bearing plants, cruder forms of vegetation were growing in steaming marsh and swamp. Strange forms—some of them more like animals than plants. Algae in the water—squirming scum—Spirogyra—"frog spit," you used to call it in your swimming pool days. Mosses, lichens, mushrooms, clinging to rock and sand, fumbling their way up from the water into the air. Then the great ferns, with life held in spores beneath their fronds. And their horsetail rushes. But not the small, dwarfed rushes which we see now. Great shafts of spongy greenness towering above the swamps, arching to form dark tunnels through which gigantic reptiles crawled.

A dripping, steaming, bubbling, teeming, hot new world rolling among the stars for millions of cool years. And then, at last, a cooled and hardened world in which flowers bloomed, birds sang and man stalked upon his conquering way. The great swamp creatures dead and gone, hardly a trace of them remaining. The skeleton of a Trachodon—the skull of a Neanderthal man—and a horsetail rush, growing beside a railroad track, its 50-foot shoots dwarfed to a mosquito's perch.

Whale of a story, that! And it's more than the story of a plant—it's the story of YOU. There are horsetail rushes in you, too—things, in you, that have come down millions of years. Hot, slimy impulses—hate and greed and envy and fear—holdovers from the old days of swamp and cave. Dwarfed a bit, by civilization, but still persisting beside the track of your soul.

Think of that when you look at a horsetail rush.

Yes, the horsetail rush will certainly make you feel humble, but there's another little plant that will brace your knees and put new hope in your heart. "Sisyrinchium," the botanists have tagged it, but the children have a better name—"blue eyed grass." Remember how it grew along your road to school, clumps of stiff, grassy blades with tiny, dark blue flowers. Common little flowers, as common as horsetail rushes, and as amazing. For that tiny flower is the beginning of the iris family and is the grandma of all the stately purple and white fleur-de-lis which fringe your garden path. There their beauty started—in that modest beginning of loveliness.

There's a thought for you. For if you have horsetail rushes lingering in your nature, you also have blue eyed grass budding there. The vestige of ugliness, but also the beginning of beauty. Like climbing up from the slime—reaching ou to a star—in your heart and min
